Claim ERDA Spending Illegal

By Jon Powers

HIGHLAND
Mid-Hudson Nuclear Opponents (NO), in a strongly worded protest to Gov. Hugh Carey, has charged that expenditures made by the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (ERDA) since Aug. 9—including publication of the Lloyd Site Master Development Plan—are possibly illegal and should be halted.

The basis for NO's complaint is legislation signed by Gov. Carey on Aug. 9 restructuring the former Atomic and Space Development Authority (ASDA) into the new ERDA. That legislation, NO claims, expressly prohibits ERDA from disseminating information on atomic power.

In a Jan. 2 letter to the governor, Dr. Peter Brown, coordinator of NO's education committee, states that the legislation's "main purpose was to redirect New York's energy research and development policies away from nuclear energy and toward new energy technologies. The ERDA act defines 'new energy technologies,' in contrast to fossil fuel energy and nuclear fission energy, as 'methods not in common commercial use.' Brown also points out that the ERDA legislation specifically states that the new authority may only develop sites "for generating facilities based on new energy technologies" and to "disseminate information relating to the development and use of new energy technologies."

Since Gov. Carey signed the Aug. 9 legislation, ERDA has continued its site studies in the Town of Lloyd and has concluded that the area can suitably accommodate as many as four nuclear power plants.

"The authority's former power," states Brown, "to disseminate information relating to atomic power, was repealed."

In November, ERDA published its Lloyd Site Master Development Plan, which outlined numerous so-called advantages for developing the site for atomic generation. This Wednesday, the authority will conduct an informational meeting to explain and defend its report.

During that period, ERDA representatives also have appeared at meetings in Highland, New Paltz and Poughkeepsie to discuss the conclusions reached for the Lloyd site and to defend nuclear development in general.

ERDA officials have stated that they will accept inquiries from public utilities concerning the Lloyd site—with the ultimate goal being nuclear construction at the site—shortly after Wednesday's meeting.

That is a move that NO—an organization which represents the members of a number of Mid-Hudson area groups opposed to nuclear power in the Valley—apparently hopes to prevent through its letter to the governor, and through possible court action at a later date.

"I am outraged at the spectacle of former ASDA officials continuing to waste precious public funds for purposes appearing to have no legal or statutory justification," Brown said in his letter to the governor, "I would greatly appreciate it if you would promptly initiate a thorough investigation of this matter and let me know the basis for these most questionable expenditures."

In addition to his work with NO, Brown serves as chairman of the New York State Sierra Club's Energy Committee and as head of the statewide Safe Energy Coalition. He is a professor at the State University College at New Paltz.

The propriety of ERDA's continued involvement at the Lloyd Site since Aug. 9 has been questioned on numerous occasions. ERDA officials have contended that to suspend its site studies at this point would be to waste the several million dollars spent during the past two years on work at the Lloyd site. They claim that some of that money can be recovered by the sale of the master plan to an interested utility.

Wednesday's meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Highland High School.

Protest Pole Picnic

Pole-sitting with a purpose is Ron Riech of Weare, N.H., who climbed a 170 ft. weather tower before dawn Sunday at the site of the proposed nuclear power plant in Seabrook, N.H. to protest the building of the facility. Local police and officials from the Public Service Co. were guarding the area but had no plans to try to remove Riech, who has provisions for several days with him. (UPI)

Atomic Power Hearings Set

KINGSTON

Warning against the probable dangers of nuclear power generation—and the unavoidable impacts of nuclear development in the Towns of Lloyd and Esopus—the Ulster County Environmental Management Council has urged residents of the Mid-Hudson Valley to attend the two informational meetings that will be held this week to discuss various facets of atomic development.

On Wednesday, the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (ERDA) will present its Lloyd Site Master Development Plan for public perusal and comment. Wednesday's meeting—which will be chaired by Gifford Beal, chairman of the Ulster County Planning Board, and will include presentations by a number of professional consultants who performed studies at the Lloyd site—will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Highland High School on Pancake Hollow Road in the Town of Lloyd.

On Sunday, Mid-Hudson Nuclear Opponents (NO) will present its own informational meeting on nuclear technology starting at 2 p.m. at the New Paltz High School on South Putt Corners Road. Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-25) will act as moderator of the afternoon session. A panel of scientists will evaluate the impact of four nuclear power plants proposed for the Lloyd-Esopus site by ERDA.

In a statement released this week, the Environmental Management Council pointed out that proposed nuclear development in the Town of Lloyd—as well as plans to construct an atomic power plant in Greene County just north of Saugerties—will have effects that will be felt by residents throughout Ulster County and the Mid-Hudson region.

By attending both meetings on Wednesday and Sunday, the council stated that residents should obtain sufficient information to assess and evaluate both the advantages and disadvantages of nuclear development in Ulster County. The council, which will co-sponsor Sunday's meeting in New Paltz, noted that serious questions have arisen concerning the safety and practicality of nuclear development.

"Initially, nuclear power was hailed as being the new, safe, clean and inexpensive source of energy for all our future needs, but time has shown that none of these claims are valid," said council chairman

Donald C. Bruyn, "We must stop and re-assess the nuclear industry in light of all the unsolved problems, including management of radioactive wastes, possible theft of nuclear materials for acts of terrorism and radioactive emissions in air and water.

"Once again we recognize that conservation and development of alternate sources of energy can take the place of a technology that has grown too fast, too soon and is in need of caution. We do not wish to satisfy immediate power needs at the expense of generations to come."

UPI DATELINE

'It Was Horrible'

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. — "It was horrible ... this is the worst one yet," a woman said of the 200-kiloton to onemegaton range nuclear explosion detonated underneath the desert this weekend and felt as far as 300 miles away.

The often-postponed blast, code named "Muenster," was set off at 11:15 a.m. PST Saturday and was up to 50 times greater than the a-bombs that ended World War II, with a yield equivalent to 200,000 to 1 million tons of TNT, a spokesman for the Energy and Research Development Agency said.

Hijackers Surrender

MANILA, the Philippines (UPI) — Two Filipino hijackers, armed with pistols and explosives, surrendered to authorities at Manila International Airport early Tuesday, ending a 10-hour drama during which they threatened to kill 200 passengers aboard a Japan Air Lines jetliner.

The two gunmen who seized the DC8 at the Manila airport this afternoon had released all the passengers in exchange for a promise that they could fly on to Tokyo with the captive crew and other airline personnel. But they gave themselves up after the Japanese government refused to grant them permission to land in Tokyo because they were armed.

Scandinavian Tempest

BRUSSELS, Belgium — A new storm swept toward Scandinavia today on the heels of weekend tempests that killed dozens of persons in a wide swath of destruction from Britain to the Swiss Alps.

More than four dozen persons died and at least eight were missing as a result of the rain, snow and hurricane force winds that pounded the continent.

Damage to property, crops and livestock was expected to total millions of dollars.

Vow to Fight Partition

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Moderate political leaders have vowed to fight proposals to partition Lebanon into religious zones as a means of ending the country's bloody nine-month-old civil war.

A three-week-old cease-fire appeared to be crumbling, with rival Christian and Moslem militiamen battling in Beirut's shell-scarred eastern suburbs late Sunday.

Snipers wounded six persons and gunmen set up roadblocks across the city. Police reported at least 48 abductions over the weekend.

Airline Strike Over

MIAMI — The nation's third longest airline strike in history is over. After a 127-day shutdown, National Airlines was back in business.

National rushed requalifying of pilots and mounted a heavy advertising campaign today to mark the end of the strike. An airline spokesman said limited service would resume at 8:45 a.m. EST Tuesday with departure of a flight to New Orleans and San Francisco.

Full Dress Leap

LONDON—To commemorate his 700th parachute jump, British army sergeant Hector MacMillan made a leap in full Scottish national dress, including kilts, while playing "The Road to the Isles" on his bagpipe.

New PI Law Causing Confusion, Problems

By Matt Spireng

KINGSTON
Confusion and problems surround the implementation of the new state law which went into effect Jan. 1 decriminalizing public intoxication.

Under the new law, persons intoxicated to the degree that they are considered a danger to themselves or to others are supposed to be taken to sobering-up stations set up by the state Department of Mental Hygiene. No detoxification centers have been established in Ulster County. In fact, only 21 such centers were ready in the entire state when the new law went into effect on New Year's Day.

In a statement issued to police agencies, Gov. Hugh Carey indicated that public intoxicants can be taken to state psychiatric centers if they are able to make judgments and want to go voluntarily. If they are so drunk that they can't make judgments, then they can be taken to a hospital. If they are aware of what they are doing, and won't voluntarily go with police, then they can't be bothered (unless they break a law). If they consent, drunks can also be taken to their homes.

Under the new law, police agencies could be turned into taxi or ambulance services for drunks, some area law enforcement officers have indicated.

Many police agencies don't have a firm policy yet on what they will do with drunks.

Since the new law went into effect, Kingston Police have already been bothered by a man who summoned them to a bar where he had been drinking only to demand a ride home. He was advised to call a taxi, but an anonymous phone call minutes later to police stating that the man had threatened to kill himself resulted in the man getting his ride home.

Explaining that he can understand that the theory behind the change in the law is to try to rehabilitate or cure alcoholics, Kingston Police Chief Julius M. Glassman said, "I don't see how it will work out as far as police departments are concerned."

Glassman said he is going to stress to his men that they should not convey drunks anywhere unless they are under arrest.

Sheriff Thomas F. Mayone said he will direct deputies who come in contact with intoxicated to try to contact relatives to pick them up or to arrest them for disorderly conduct if they are abusive.

Both Mayone and Glassman were critical of the state's failure to set up detoxification centers.

"There are a lot of unclear areas about the roll of police (under the new law)," said Emil Groth, Ulster County's alcohol abuse coordinator. "The police have to make a lot of evaluations."

According to Groth, attempts are now underway to hold a meeting in Ulster County later this month with law enforcement agency heads and state representatives in an attempt to clear up some of the confusion.

"The law probably needs some amending," said Groth.

Community Development Seeks Funds for 'Hall'

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON
The city's Community Development Agency will hold public hearings on Wednesday and again on Jan. 12 on a plan to apply for up to $300,000 in federal funds for the restoration of the old city hall at 408 Broadway.

What the city is hoping to put together in fact is a package plan of federal and state funds to restore the building which has sat vacant since September of 1972 when the government moved to its new quarters at 1 Meadow Street. The $300,000 represents the federal share. The city already has a commitment of up to $500,000 in state funds.

The catch with the state is that its money will be given only on a matching basis which means that if the city gets approval of federal funding—and there are no guarantees—the maximum amount available for restoration would be $600,000, less than half the money city officials say is needed to restore and provide adequate parking for the 104-year old landmark.

The city is not expected to put any money into the project—a referendum to spend up to $1.5 million for the restoration of the building was defeated by a 3-2 margin in the November elections.

The funds the city is applying for are "discretionary" in that they are in addition to the city's $1.4 million yearly allotment under the Community Development program. That program will not be affected by action on the discretionary funding application.

Wednesday's public hearing will be chaired by Alderman Clifford G. Sinsabaugh (D-10th Ward), chairman of both the Common Council's Community Development Committee and the Community Development Advisory Board.

This public hearing differs from last year's public hearings on Community Development projects in that the city has already established its priorities—old city hall—and is asking public opinion on those priorities rather than asking the public for its priorities and then establishing a program from that.

Community Development Executive Director Ralph A. Morallo (who was not connected with the program when public hearings were held initially last January) allows that things have been somewhat reversed but says this year's forum still allows for adequate public input.

"We'll be getting a reaction from the public as to their feelings on the city hall," Morallo said. He said the fact that the city wants to spend money on city hall would not rule out other projects.

"Any adverse criticism would have to go back to the Community Development Council," Morallo said.

The city is working under something of a deadline with this latest Community Development project. Federal regulations call for submission of the "pre-application for discretionary funds" by Feb. 13. However, the package has to be submitted to a "state clearing house" for approval by Jan. 13, the day after the last public hearing.

Exhibit Of River Vessels

SAUGERTIES

In honor of the Bicentennial celebration, Saugerties, Chapter, N.S. Daughters of the American Revolution, will sponsor an exhibit of model Hudson River ships Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 10 and 11.

The exhibit, which is open to the public, will be held in the BeeVee House on Route 32 from 2-5 p.m.

The models, made many years ago by James G. Moore of West Camp, were loaned for the exhibit by Harry G. Moore. Made by an expert craftsman, they depict in exact detail boats from the early days on the river up through and including the modern day-liners.

Writer and lecturer Donald C. Ringwald of Latham, president of the Steamship Historical Society of America, will be the guest speaker on Jan. 11. Ringwald will describe the various ships and answer questions about them.

School Board Session

KINGSTON

Resolutions on the collector's return of tax warrants and approval of a company for participation in the tax sheltered annuity program are on the agenda when the Board of Education of Kingston High Schools Consolidated meets Thursday at the George Washington School, 67 Wall Street, beginning at 8 p.m.

The resolutions will be presented by Fred Hofbauer, chairman of the Business Management Committee. Other items on the agenda include reports from the Personnel Committee chaired by W. James Penrose, the Communications committee, chaired by Ronald Meyer, the Student Services Committee and Long Range Planning Committee headed by Doris Mulvin, the Building Committee under Evelyn Corsones, and a report from Superintendent of Schools Louis A. Salzmann.

Meetings Coincide

HIGHLAND

Wednesday's meeting of the Ulster County Planning Board will be held at 7 p.m. in Room E-39 of the Highland High School.

The meeting place coincides with the site of a public informational meeting that will begin at 7:30 p.m. involving the Lloyd Site aster Development Plan prepared by the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority. Planning Board Chairman Gifford Beal will serve as moderator of the informational session.

On the agenda for Wednesday's planning board meeting are several reviews of zoning referrals concerning properties in the towns of Woodstock and Rochester, a proposed zoning amendment in the Town of Rochester and a proposed zoning revision in the Village of New Paltz.

Highland High School is located on Pancake Hollow Road, which branches off New Paltz Road, which branches off Route 299, 2.3 miles east of the Thruway interchange in New Paltz.

Ecology Review

MILLBROOK
The New York State Environmental Quality Review Act will be discussed at an open meeting sponsored by the Dutchess County Planning Department Tuesday at 9:30 p.m. at the Farm and Home Center in Millbrook.

The new law requires the preparation of an environmental impact statement on any local government project which would significantly affect the environment. It has been approved by the New York State Legislature and will take effect in June. Questions from the audience will be answered following a panel discussion on the new law.

TOWN OF ROCHESTER
The Rochester Town Board, acting on the suggestion of the town's environmental commission, unanimously approved a resolution proposing a moratorium on nuclear construction and development until all unknown impacts are resolved.

The measure was passed at the town board's final meeting of 1975. The board had previously passed a resolution expressing its opposition to nuclear development, but the environmental council urged a new resolution because it felt the original resolution was not strong enough.

The measure was introduced by councilman Vernon Gray. The board also received a special report from the commission dealing with the feasibility of nuclear generation.

In a related move, the board accepted the resignation of commission member Rita S. Ayers, and appointed the following members to serve for terms effective Jan. 1: Edward Bober, Arthur J. Putnam and Bruce Schoonmaker (three year terms); Diane Lenard, Romeo Muller and Eric Karoll (two year terms); Robert Christian, Robert Larsen and Ralph Swenson (one year terms). Named as ex-officio members of the commission were the highway superintendent, town historian and planning board chairman. Putnam was recommended as Rochester's representative on the Ulster County Environmental Management Council.

In other action at the Dec. 30 meeting, the town board:
• Passed a resolution which allows Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corp. to impose a fuel adjustment charge for special lighting districts, as permitted under the Public Service Law.
• Reported a year-end balance of about $3,000 in the general fund and $4,400 in the federal revenue sharing fund. The meeting was the last for outgoing Supervisor Wilfred Neff and councilman Sam Waruch.

Arrest 3 for Coach House Fire

By Matt Spireng

KINGSTON

After nearly a month of investigation into a fire which extensively damaged a building owned by the Coach House Players, Inc., Kingston detectives on Sunday arrested three young Connelly residents on multiple charges, including arson and burglary.

Arrested in connection with the Dec. 12 blaze were Edwin Sauers, 19, George Lober, 19, and Robert Sauers Jr., 22, all of Box 43. They were each charged with two counts of third degree burglary, and one count each of third degree arson and petit larceny. Robert Sauers was additionally charged with one count of seventh degree criminal possession of a controlled substance when he was found to have an alleged marijuana cigarette at the time of his arrest. They were jailed pending court action.

Detectives said two fires were apparently set at the building at 12 Augusta Street after the trio allegedly broke in. The first blaze was said to have been set before they left, taking a sword with them. The three allegedly returned later to see how the fire was burning, but found it had gone out. They again entered the building and allegedly started a second fire, detectives said.

The fire was discovered at about 2 a.m. by a neighbor who called firemen to the scene. One side of the building used by the community theater group for rehearsals was extensively damaged. Roger Scholl, president of the Coach House Players, estimated the damage at about $50,000. The group has been rehearsing in various homes in preparation for their next production in February.

Out of Lineup

Following a lineup Saturday night, Saugerties Town Police charged Terrence Carney, 23, of Hilltop Apartments, Saugerties, with first degree assault and unlawful imprisonment in connection with a knife attack on a woman New Year's Eve.

At the time of the incident, police said a 43-year-old woman was leaving a store in Simmons Plaza when a young male asked her for a ride and then proceeded to slash her on the face and neck with a linoleum knife when she refused. It took 43 stitches to close the woman's wounds.

Police said today that the knife, which was recovered at the scene, had Carney's name scratched on the handle. He was positively identified by the victim and witnesses in the lineup, according to authorities.

Carney was jailed in lieu of $10,000 bail following arraignment before Saugerties Town Justice Timothy Murphy.

Purse Snatched

Kingston detectives are investigating a purse snatching incident which occurred Friday night on Main Street.

Police Beat

peratures and high winds hampered fire fighters' efforts. Ronk said the blaze apparently started due to poor insulation in the heating stove.

Clothing in small adult sizes should be left at the home of Mrs. Lois Craig, two houses from the Binnewater fire house.

Rifle Shot

Saugerties Town Police charged Donald Schaffer, 25, of 8 Garden Circle, Barclay Heights with second degree reckless endangerment and fourth degree criminal mischief on Sunday after he allegedly fired a rifle through the door of the home of Harriet P. Schaffer of Route 212, Saugerties. Police said the woman was apparently the suspect's step-mother. Schaffer was fined $250 after pleading guilty to the criminal mischief charge. The reckless endangerment charge was referred to family court.

Burned Out

A plea has gone out for clothing and other items for a Binnewater couple who lost all their belongings in a fire Sunday.

Binnewater Fire Chief Vernon Ronk said the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lorenzo on Binnewater and Lake Hill Roads was fully involved in flame when they reached the scene shortly after 9 a.m. More than 60 firemen from the Binnewater, Rosendale, Bloomington and Tillson companies battled the flames for more than five hours. Teddy May Run

Mrs. Rose Kennedy says "pressures" may force her only surviving son, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., to disregard her wishes and run for President this year, the National Enquirer reported Sunday. The weekly newspaper published a full-page interview with Mrs. Kennedy. (UPI)

Reagan 'Show' Opens

By UPI

Ronald Reagan's road show opened in New Hampshire today and President Ford's bid for renewal of his run in the White House took him to St. Louis to talk with farmers.

Reagan was to fly to Manchester, N.H., later today, for his first three days of primary campaigning. He planned stops in at least 17 isolated and mostly conservative-leaning hamlets.

Even before his arrival, Ford backers were criticizing the former California governor's most controversial proposal, to cut $90 billion worth of federal projects and return their functions to the states. Ford supporters raised the prospect of increased local taxes as a result of Reagan's proposal.

Ford was to address the American Farm Bureau Federation in St. Louis today. Although the trip was billed as "nonpolitical," it was considered unlikely Ford would hurt his campaign by defending his farm policy at the convention and discussing the affairs of state at a meeting of regional news executives.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz told UPI Ford has been hurt politically among farmers because of last year's temporary embargo on grain sales to Russia and Poland. But Butz said the President will be in good shape politically by November and would get above 60 per cent of the farm vote if he runs against Hubert Humphrey.

White House chief of staff Richard Cheney said Sunday he did not think Ford's approval of covert aid to a pro-West faction in the Angola civil war would hurt the President and neither would portrayals of Ford as accident prone. "I think the American people have always had a bit of sense of humor about their political leadership," Cheney said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

As usual, Democrats were campaigning all over the country, with some attaching their hopes to the first balloting of the year two weeks from today in Iowa precinct caucuses and a week later in Mississippi caucuses.

Ford Wants Angola Cease-Fire

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — President Ford called for an immediate cease-fire in Angola today and warned the United States may take "limited measures" to block unacceptable Soviet actions in other parts of the world.

But he ruled out cutting off grain shipments to Russia in retaliation for Soviet intervention in Angola. He said it would be a "serious mistake" that would increase tensions between the two superpowers. "We favor an immediate cease-fire, an end to all outside intervention and a government of national unity, permitting the solution of the Angolan problem by the Angolans themselves," Ford said in a speech prepared for delivery later today to the American Farm Bureau Federation convention in St. Louis.

"U.S.-Soviet rivalry in some areas around the world has, unfortunately, not ceased," Ford said. But instead of stopping grain sales to Russia, as he said some in Congress have suggested, the President said, "The answer is to take other appropriate limited measures necessary to block — and stop — Soviet actions that we find unacceptable."

He did not spell out other areas of Soviet troublemaking or specify what he meant by the threat of "limited measures."

He said a shutoff of grain would serve no useful purpose and would not produce an immediate gain in diplomatic leverage. He argued that the Soviets could get along without American wheat.

"The linkage of grain with diplomacy would mean disruption and hardship for you, the farmer, a serious increase in tensions between the world's two superpowers, and no effect in Angola," Ford said.

Ford's chief of staff, Richard Cheney, said Sunday the administration was a "discouraged" by Pravda's urging of an end to foreign intervention in the former Portuguese colony. But it was not clear whether the Soviet Communist party newspaper was referring to the 500 Soviet advisers and 7,500 Cuban combat troops in Angola.

Ford was to fly to St. Louis for a day that also included a luncheon with state and national farm bureau officials and a question-and-answer session with midwestern news and broadcast executives.

Mayor Koenig's Message

City of Kingston taxpayers, who like the other Ulster County residents are going to shell out plenty of tax money on the present year, can take solace in one of Mayor Koenig's six proposals he outlined New Years Day in his message to the Common Council.

The mayor promised a city wide updating of property assessment records in the hope that new revenues will be found to lessen the tax burden on the property owner.

Koenig is proposing the undertaking of a comprehensive plan to correct deficiencies in the real property tax assessment inequities.

The Freeman applauds Koenig for this proposal. The costly certiorari proceedings, which resulted in thousands of dollars being returned by the city to some firms doing business here, directly resulted in the huge tax increase residents are being forced to pay in 1976.

The mayor also rates a pat on the back for insisting that charter revision will be pursued. Though he was against the recent charter revision proposal on the Novembw ballot, the mayor claimed it was only because there wouldn't be enough time to implement it.

He has vowed to appoint a new commission and the Freeman recommends that the appointments be made as quickly as possible so that work on a new charter can get underway immediately. A new charter is a priority for this city.

For the first time since his 1972 message, Koenig didn't make a promise that the Broadway area opposite City Hall will be developed in the next few months.

A combination of the tight money pinch and the inability to get a food store in the area has just about put and end to the hopes that the desolate wasteland will be booming.

The mayor's remarks in the Bicentennial celebration were brief, to the point and sincere.

As he begins his fourth term in office, Koenig appears to be setting goals that are within reason and that will be beneficial to city residents many years after his administration has left office.

Inside Report

Ford's Dropouts

By Rowland Evans
And Robert Novak

DALLAS — Some cheerless members of President Ford's state campaign committee, stunned by his approval of the energy bill, gathered in Dallas Christmas night to agree on this damage assessment: Ronald Reagan may not only defeat but actually humiliate the President in the Texas primary May 1.

The trauma in Dallas was duplicated in Houston and elsewhere throughout the state within the Texas Republican establishment. Having followed Sen. John Tower into the Ford camp, they fear they may now be driven from party control by a surge of right-wing precinct workers backing Reagan.

Viewing Reagan with minimum admiration and his Texas supporters with maximum disdain, this state's establishment Republicans are not boarding the Reagan bandwagon. Rather, many will quietly drop out of the Ford campaign and pray that Reagan will, somehow, be stopped and the establishment rescued — perhaps by John B. Connally as favorite-son candidate.

The national impact of the Texas dropout could be profound. Tower-led Texas Republican regulars will not repeat for Gerald Ford in 1976 their 1968 mission for Richard M. Nixon when their steadfastness prevented a Southern breakaway for Reagan. This time, unless Reagan is stopped in earlier primaries, he will be favored to capture Texas, the South's largest delegate prize and a healthy push toward the nomination.

While Mr. Ford's signing the energy bill was no great surprise in Washington, his Texas supporters had believed in a veto to the end. Michael Halbouty, a Houston oil executive and Ford campaign fundraiser, came away from the Oval Office Dec. 18 believing the President had accepted his arguments that the bill would increase oil imports and decrease domestic production. When Mr. Ford announced approval of the bill Dec. 21, Halbouty immediately resigned from the Ford campaign committee.

The full count of resignations is not yet in. Nor is it known whether it will include State Rep. Fred Agnich, a Dallas oil millionaire and Republican national committeeman. But whether or not Agnich formally resigns, nobody expects him to provide further help here for the President. Even Sen. Tower is expected to become a less visible Ford man.

One prominent Dallas Republican, having expected a veto, now will stay away from the Ford campaign. While not formally resigning from the campaign committee, he will refuse to run as a Ford-pledged national convention delegate. "I think Ford may be embarrassed by Reagan here," he told us bluntly, "and I don't want to be part of it."

The energy bill's adverse impact, furthermore, goes beyond the oil industry, which remains pervasively influential in Texas. This state's ordinary Republican voter tends to be an issue-oriented, doctrinaire conservative. "I guarantee you he cares about the energy bill," a glum Ford supporter told us. By approving continued oil price controls after preaching decontrol, the President also reinforced accusations of "waffling" — the word habitually used to describe him by Texas Republicans, pro-Ford and anti-Ford alike.

The energy decision only worsens a grave situation here for Mr. Ford. While Tower had corralled the party establishment, the effective precinct work in Dallas and Houston was being done by Reagan forces.

Furthermore, the Reagan campaign may attract hordes of rural conservative Democrats into the Republican primary. One anti-Reagan Republican believes the normal statewide Republican primary vote of 125,000 could rise to 225,000 or 250,000. His cold analysis: new voters will back Reagan.

Coincidentally, the Texas Republican party could be transformed if Reagan voters swarm into party precinct caucuses on primary day. Accordingly, establishment Republican leaders are seeking means to avert a Reagan avalanche May 1, not just to save Mr. Ford but to save themselves and to keep the party from being taken over by what one such Republican calls "John Birchers and other kooks."

Some Republicans urge Ford attacks charging that Reagan's policies would bring the twin anathemas of a state income tax and grain export controls. Others believe attacking Reagan will only enrage the conservative rank-and-file without reconstructing a non-waffling image for Mr. Ford.

But that reconstruction is so difficult after the energy decision that important Republicans wistfully hope the Justice Department will throw out the new primary law under the Voting Rights Act, reinstating an establishment-controlled caucus system which would deal out Reagan.

Only slightly more realistic is hope that Connally, easily the most popular public man in Texas, will enter the primary to expel all outsiders and save the regular leadership. That this may now be Mr. Ford's best chance for salvation in a state considered his Southern keystone scarcely three months ago reflects the startling speed of the President's political decline.

Warning From Arabs

The heavy cruiser "Quincy" lay at anchor in Great Bitter Lake. The President sat in his wheelchair behind a secondary gun mount. On the gray deck was a rug, a wicker table and some chairs. He was anticipating a visit from King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia.

Franklin Roosevelt expected the talk to be quid pro quo. The U.S. would give something, and get something. FDR proposed to give Ibn Saud money and technical help to turn the arid deserts into waving oceans of corn and cotton. What he would get would be Saudi Arabia's help in establishing a homeland for Jews along the Mediterranean.

Mike Reilly of the Secret Service and Harry Hopkins dashed around the gun mount. "Quick!" they said. "Come around and take a look." FDR had sent the destroyer "Murphy" to Jidda to fetch the king and his entourage.

Golden Ritual

FDR wheeled around under the bridge. The "Murphy" was heaving to against the big cruiser. Her forepeak was covered with rich rugs. A tent flapped on the bows. Ibn Saud sat on a gun mount in a gold chair. Moslem guards, armed with scimitars and rifles, manned the rails. A dead goat hung from a jackstaff.

Roosevelt retreated. The king and seven princes were piped aboard the "Quincy," U.S. Minister Eddy served as interpreter. The President believed that face-to-face diplomacy served him best.

Ibn Saud opened the conversation by saying he was old and sick. He admired FDR's aluminum wheelchair. The President ordered a second one brought on deck and presented to His Majesty.

FDR said that U.S. experts could make the deserts bloom. The king had a long, permanently sad face. "Should there not be a place for deserts?" he said. Raising and selling crops, said FDR, would bring Saudi Arabia into the 20th century as a productive nation.

"I am a warrior," the king said. "I know nothing else." Ah yes, the President said. Through many tribal wars you have brought peace and fashioned a great kingdom. Shouldn't older leaders, such as we, give the young a better standard of living?

Ibn Saud seemed impatient. His people were not ready for such progress. He was declining millions of dollars and technical assistance. FDR ordered lunch to be served on deck.

In the presence of the Moslem, the President could not smoke and could not have a cocktail. The two ate rice, lamb stew and grapefruit.

Afterward, FDR switched the topic. "I am interested in the future of Palestine," he said. The king frowned. He leaned forward. "You mean Jews?" he said. Yes, the President said. It seemed shameful to him that these unwarlike people had been driven from many lands and had no country of their own.

Ibn Saud's voice fell to an ominous whisper. When peace comes, he said, the Jews should be returned to the lands from which they had been driven. This, FDR said, would keep them separated from each other. He had information that 3 million Jews had been killed in Poland.

The king nodded. In that case, he said, there would be room in Poland for the resettlement of 3 million Palestinian Jews. Roosevelt appeared to be startled. The total number of Jews, he said, would be small compared to the number of Arabs.

Non-Stop 'No'

Ibn Saud looked him in the eye and said his first word in English: "No." FDR said the Jews were industrious and would make good neighbors. The king did not raise his voice, but he refused to stop talking.

That, he said, was the trouble. They wanted to settle on a strip of land along the Mediterranean and, with the help of millions of dollars and British pounds, they would build cities and farms. "Give the Arabs that much money," he said, "and they will do as well."

FDR, who was committed publicly and privately to a Jewish homeland, ran into unending argument. The Jews, the king said, had no more desire to live near Arabs than the Arabs wanted to live near Jews. In time, it must lead to war.

When the President returned to Washington, he was old and gray. He asked House speaker pro tempore John McCormack if he could address the Congress seated. McCormack said, "We'll have a good-sized chair ready."

On March 1st, 1945, FDR spoke to Congress. It was long, hopeful and vacuous. He won a patter of mistaken applause when he said, "... from Ibn Saud of Arabia I learned more of the whole problem of the Moslems and the Jewish problem in five minutes than I could have learned by the exchange of a dozen letters."

Chic Goes Second-Hand

WASHINGTON (KFS)—Vuitton luggage, Gucci shoes, Hermes scarves and other ridiculously priced advertisements for one's self and the manufacturer?

There is a very good quote by Diana Vreeland, the famous editor of Vogue and Harper's Bazaar, about that kind of thing in "Cheap Chic" (by Catherine Milinaire and Carol Troy, Harmony Books, N.Y., $5.95 paper): "When I was in Beverly Hills I went down Wilshire Boulevard on a Saturday afternoon and saw crowds of cars and people. Usually there are never very many people—after all, it's not a big city. And I said to my son, who was driving, 'Oh, God, I hope it isn't an accident!' And he said, 'Good God no, that's just Saturday afternoon at Gucci's.' All these men bring in girls who want to shop. That's all they want. At the end of the week it's, 'Baby, I'll take you to Gucci if you're good.'"

Common people like R. Sargent Shriver wear Gucci shoes and make fools of themselves in public in other ways. Their female counterparts, in Washington's Georgetown at least, have Vietnamese faience elephants for end tables and are still terrorized by their hairdressers and their couturiers.

Classic in Blue

Some of the couturiers have worked it

out so they can make money without having to discipline rich, worthless women. Yves St. Laurent is beyond that: "More and more I believe in well-made, basic clothes with no 'fashion' that last many years without transformation—exactly like a blue jean. 'Classic' seems to be an old-fashioned word, but I think the contrary. A blue jean is a classic and I don't think it's old."

If you're going to dress yourself in blue jeans, you need a fully formed self to dress. A great many people do nowadays. The reign of universal single-look fashion was broken five or six years ago and it's stayed broken. The corporate creeps may run out to buy themselves leisure suits, but far, far more dress to suit themselves. Compare now to a decade ago, and notice how few people want to know what the other people are going to be wearing at the party. If it's a dress-alike party, it's a people-alike party, and who wants to go?

If there are no more rules of dress, then how do we learn to dress for ourselves? Milinaire and Troy take up that problem in "Cheap Chic," and for all but the hollow, the shallow and the self-less, their book should help. It's one thing to reject fashion and another to know what you want to put on and how to find it, if

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

There were several other names on J. Edgar Hoover's hate list; the old bulldog subjected most of them to FBI harassment. Indeed, Hoover merely had to develop a mild dislike for a person, and the FBI would begin breathing down his neck.

More than one distinguished lawman, for example, was systematically smeared by the FBI because his name happened to be mentioned as Hoover's possible successor.

Sometimes the late FBI chief kept running memos on his victims — an FBI version of the old high school "slam books." Agents would record everything they heard about the unsuspecting subject, false or not, in a running log for Hoover's perusal.

The quickest way for a free people to lose their liberty is to grant too much power to their policemen. Hoover overstepped his authority; he grossly misused the FBI. Since no government official can assume powers that the people don't bestow, the old G-man was acting illegally.

The American way calls for full revelation and sweeping reforms. It is essential, therefore, to dig out Hoover's secrets. If they are buried with him, a future FBI director will find it easier to imitate him.

Here's how Hoover used the FBI to harass his enemies and smear his rivals:

—The New York Post's liberal editor, James Wechsler, was high on Hoover's hate list. When Wechsler sent a reporting team to Washington in 1959 to prepare a series about the FBI, the apprehensive Hoover assigned FBI squads to follow the reporters. Agents broke into the room of one reporter at the old Raleigh Hotel, hoping to find blackmail evidence. When none turned up, the frustrated agents talked of planting narcotics in the room and notifying the Washington police drug squad. The plan was discarded, however, not because it was illegal but because it was risky.

—Hoover came to hate the late Attorney General Robert Kennedy with a passion. After Kennedy visited two FBI field offices, Hoover solicited affidavits from the agents about Kennedy's private remarks on wiretaps. The purpose was to portray Kennedy as a liar. One agent, who reportedly was pressured to distort his affidavit, refused to give one.

—The FBI chief had a running feud with Walter Bedell Smith, the late, distinguished Undersecretary of State. Hoover directed his agents to gather gossip about Smith and to spread rumors that Smith was having an affair with a top woman official. The patrician Smith got so enraged that he accused Hoover of wasting the taxpayers' money on rumor mongering and threatened: "I'll fight you all over Washington if I have to." Hoover backed down.

—The FBI director also engaged in bureaucratic warfare against another Attorney General, Robert Jackson, who later was appointed to the Supreme Court. With documents in hand, Hoover tried to persuade President Franklin D. Roosevelt that Jackson was inefficient.

—Hoover conducted an ugly, "running memo" campaign against former Immigration Commissioner Joseph Swing who had the audacity to complain that Hoover wasn't cooperative. The FBI chief went personally to President Dwight Eisenhower with gossip about Swing. One unproved story was that the Immigration Commissioner was an alcoholic.

—Nothing infuriated the old FBI curmudgeon more than talk of being replaced. At one time, Texas Public Safety Director Homer Garrison was mentioned as a possible successor. Although Garrison had done nothing against Hoover, the G-man ordered agents to check into Garrison's past. When the investigation produced nothing derogatory, Hoover spread the word to his agents to give Garrison as little cooperation as possible.

—Hoover also feuded with Detroit's respected police commissioner George Edwards who had suggested police chiefs should be more independent in their thinking about Hoover. When Edwards was named to the federal bench, the FBI chief sought secretly but unsuccessfully to block his nominations.

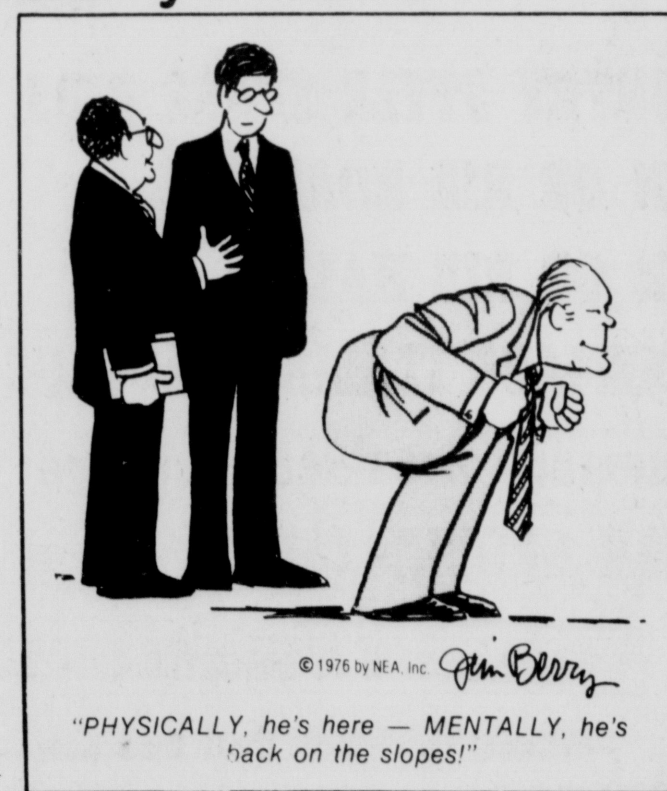

—Two other prominent police chiefs, Chicago's Wilson and Los Angeles' William Parker, also got on the wrong side of Hoover. The FBI director instructed his aides to check every index in the FBI for negative information about the two lawmen. When this turned out to be unproductive, Hoover spread the word, through his chief factotum, Clyde Tolson, that Parker was an "egomaniac" and Wilson was an "alcoholic." Neither charge was true.

J. Edgar Hoover used his enormous power as director of the FBI to uphold his viewpoints and to smear anyone he disliked. His personal power ended with his death.

But his name lives on. The FBI has now moved into a huge, esthetically displeasing structure across the street from the Justice Department. It has taken Hoover's name.

In a way, it is an appropriate monument to his memory. Its bulk overwhelms the parent agency much as he overwhelmed the Attorney General who was his superior. Its interior is also designed to accommodate the world's largest collection of papers, documents, photographs and fingerprints. These are the files of the FBI.

Berry's World

you've been brought up to simplify the difficulties of selection by wearing what everybody else wears.

Rule number one, naturally, is learn to stay healthy and keep your body in shape or don't ask the clothes to hide what you've done to yourself. A lot of the suggestions in "Cheap Chic" are just as simple and sensible, as the authors show both women and men how they can look great and have fun on three or four hundred dollars a year. Or more, if you've got it and want to spend it that way.

Begin with Boots

Thus modern fashion starts with the feet. On them you do not stint. Shoes or, better yet, boots should be the most expensive part of your wardrobe, because if you can't stand and walk comfortably it doesn't matter what else you have on — you're not going anywhere. The thought of paying $100 or more for a pair of boots is bothersome, but these are good boots so they will wear a long time, which brings us to the next precept: What's good-looking and good-feeling when it's new is just as good when it's old. Don't look at the price, look at "the cost-per-wear." If you're going to wear boots 200 times a year for five years, $150 bucks isn't expensive.

Good things like boots you buy new and grow old with, but other items of clothing are best to buy second-hand. Once upon a time, it was hippies and poor people who bought old clothes, but now the hipster elements in Hollywood and savvy people generally do. Second-hand clothes offer a greater variety. You're not stuck with the fads of the moment and the value is incomparably greater, especially for women. Unless a woman wants to pay hundreds and hundreds of dollars, she's not going to be able to get good materials and workmanship in first-hand rags.

Some people probably shy away from second-hand clothes because they don't know where or how to shop for old clothes, or what to do with them after they have them. Milinaire and Troy tell you all about that and many other matters more exotic but within the range of low-budget people. If you are enough of your own person to have a feel for your own distinctive fashion, "Cheap Chic" can tell you how you can get from concept to execution.

For students of society, the book documents how far we've moved from reigning norms, servants and services, snobism and drastic gender definition to uni-class, unisex, washing machines, limited closet space and I-don't-take-it-if-I-can't-get-under-the-airplane-seat.

The Gallup Poll

7 in 10 Americans Predict a Year of Economic Trouble

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J.

Although many of the government's top economists predict an upturn in the economy during 1976, the public does not share this optimism. Seven in 10 Americans, in fact, predict 1976 will be a year of economic trouble, while at the same time, 57 per cent believe unemployment will rise. By way of background it is interesting to note that the predictions of the public have often been more on target than those of economic experts. Two years ago, at the start of 1974 for example, most economists said the economy would improve, but the public accurately predicted a worsening economy.

Gloom Here Shared by People Abroad

The gloomy outlook of Americans at the start of the new year is shared by publics in many of the other nations in the survey. Most pessimistic are the British (73 per cent see trouble ahead), the Swiss (72 per cent) and the Americans (70 per cent). Considerable pessimism is also found in Italy, West Germany, Canada, Spain and Brazil.

Job Outlook — Here and Abroad

While nearly six in 10 Americans (57 per cent) predict rising unemployment, the U.S. public is less pessimistic than one year ago, at the start of 1975, when nearly nine in 10 (87 per cent) predicted a year of increasing unemployment.

Americans are more pessimistic regarding the job outlook than are people in six of the other 11 nations surveyed, but less pessimistic than people in five nations. Most inclined to think unemployment will increase are the Swiss (77 per cent) and the British (74 per cent). Marked pessimism is also recorded in Italy, West Germany, Japan, India and Canada.

Here is the question asked to determine attitudes toward the overall economy:

"Which of these do you think is likely to be true of 1976: a year of economic prosperity or a year of economic difficulty?"

Following are the latest results and trend for the U.S. They show that while a solid majority of Americans are pessimistic about the economy, they are less bleak in outlook than two years ago at the start of 1974. At that time a record 85 per cent said the nation was headed for a year of economic trouble.

During the last weeks of 1975, Gallup-affiliated organizations in 11 nations assigned their field staff to interview representative samples of the public in each nation. In the U.S., 1,537 adults, 18 and older, were interviewed in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Dec. 12-15.

Growing Older

Lou Cottin's Observation of Canada's Programs for Senior Citizens

PART I

Lou Cottin recently covered 3,000 miles of Canada, talking with government officials and those over-60 to find out how that country approaches problems of the aging.

By Lou Cottin

Fight For Rights

What a trip! By plane, by car, by boat, by train, I crossed 3,000 miles of Canada. I went there to learn how the government of Canada relates to its 1.7 million senior citizens.

In Ottawa, the capital, I dealt with federal officials. As you'd expect, we talked about money, housing, health, nursing homes and the social life of the elderly.

Then I went to the provinces and municipalities to find out whether the federal officials had handed me a "line." After that, I took my trusty tape recording machine and talked to the old people as a check on the government officials.

One word kept cropping up in nearly every official interview and in most personal conversations. The word was "pioneers." The implication is significant. We in the United States often forget that Canada is a young country. Officially, in fact, Canada is only 108 years old. Like our own pioneers, adventurous men and women broke new ground to build a great country.

Those pioneers and their sons and daughters now make up a very large and important sector of Canada's over-60 population. They are proud of what they have done. They have grown older in years, but not in spirit. It would be impossible for the Canadian government to treat them just as "old people." The habit of fighting for and doing for themselves is basic to their lives.

R. A. Hodson, the federal director of income security and guaranteed supplementary income, said, "Retirement for Canadians constitutes a change in role but not in purpose. When young, our pioneers set the patterns for life in our country.

They now continue to dictate our country's standards for the aging. Naturally, that includes the aged who came as immigrants as well as the pioneers."

"And how does this work out in practice?" I asked. "It is impossible for such people to change. They will not relinquish their honored position as the builders of the country," he replied. "Older Canadians expect recognition for past performance as their due. Part of that expectation is the right to determine how the old may continue to help build and run the nation. In our country, those over 60 tell us what to do about aging. We wouldn't dare to tell them," Hodson said. "It would be presumptuous."

He found 'the grass is greener' on the other side of the border.

To put it bluntly, I didn't really believe him. It sounded too much like "pie in the sky." But I reserved judgment. Hodson was saying that in Canada, matters related to seniors were managed as often as possible by seniors themselves under their own independent leadership, and the government assisted with professional help and funding.

If that was true, older Canadians had to come out ahead of older Americans on most of the basic life situations encountered by seniors.

In Canada, pioneers are respected. It is even correct to say that they are revered. Because of them, senior citizens generally are admired. That admiration expresses itself in the practical aspects of senior life in Canada. It also is evident in many subtle ways, which have to do with improving the self-esteem of seniors like themselves.

My aim in reporting my trip across Canada is to show that the Canadian government actually listens to its aging citizens and acts upon their demands as quickly as possible. That seems to be the case on a federal level as well as in the provinces, the municipalities and the rural areas. When you find the conservative politicians complaining that senior citizens aren't getting enough social security, there's a story to tell.

Canada Listens

There's only one way to read columns about good things being done for seniors in places other than where you live: You need to say to yourself, "Why can't we have that improved situation here? Why not me?"

While traveling in Canada I learned that in Canada and in her provinces, the governments really listen to what seniors say about their needs and expectations. In an earlier column I pointed out also that senior initiatives spark many innovative programs. Wherever possible, seniors manage projects themselves under their own leadership. The results of that approach are reflected in many basic relationships between the Canadian elderly and their government.

Let's try a few examples:

There's inflation in Canada. There's inflation in the United States. Both countries record cost-of-living increases every three months. If the index goes up in any quarter, Canadian seniors get the increase right away, in their social security payments. The Canadian seniors wanted it that way.

In our case, from the first quarter, beginning June 1, through the last quarter, ending the following June 1, we get no increase in Social Security. The total of percentage increases between one June 1 and the next reaches us on July 3 a year later. Even that wasn't safe this year; President Ford asked Congress to limit cost-of-living Social Security increases to 5 per cent. (Luckily, Congress turned him down.)

Take another case: This relates to homeowners. The federal government of Canada appropriated $15 million to improve and restore the homes of the elderly that had fallen into disrepair. Up to $1,000 was allowed to each over-65 homeowner to effect such repairs upon proof of need. Mind you, it was not a loan.

Has anyone even broached such an idea in the U.S.?

Where do you get the money to repair your roof? And, then there's "Mincome." (That's what it is called in British Columbia.) "Mincome," as the name indicates, is minimum income. Every senior single is entitled to about $275 a month. Couples get about $425 a month. In a program similar to our SSI (Supplemental Security Income), seniors receiving less social security are brought up to that level.

Now let's take a look at a home for the aged with full health-care and nursing facilities. Baycrest in Toronto is an example of how old people can live in dignity when they themselves choose (and help run) an institution.

Baycrest is a Jewish non-profit home for the elderly. About 380 people live there. There is a two-week trial period for each prospective new resident. Applicants have a chance to find out whether they like the life. Baycrest management and present residents can determine how well the applicant will adjust. Those who find that they can't adjust return home. Those who choose to stay pay according to their ability.

Here's the tip-off on Baycrest: Nonresident elderly persons from the surrounding neighborhood spend their days at the home. They enjoy the social life. They eat their lunches there in the Baycrest cafeteria. (Lunch 75 cents. Gefilte fish on Friday, if you please. Good, too. I had some.)

I submit that when old people, nonresidents, go to an old-age home because it's a great place in which to have a pleasant time, that's news. I defy you to name such an institution in the United States.

All of that brings us logically enough to housing for the Canadian elderly. Come with me, now, to Edmonton, Alberta. There, my wife Nikka and I had the ground tour of two high-rise apartment houses: Meadowcroft (500 tenants) and Kiwanis Place (650 residents). In both buildings, the entire lobby area is for social gatherings; the three "R's," as it were: reading, recreation and repose in good company. No cold, bare-walled, folding-chaired senior center in Meadowcroft and Kiwanis Place.

The decor, the furnishings of the lobbies in Meadowcroft and Kiwanis Place were sumptuous. Nikka and I agreed completely that those lobbies are more beautiful, more comfortable than those of the finest (most expensive) hotels in Canada. The individual apartments are efficient and attractive. The halls have wall-to-wall carpet. The buildings are maintained better than most apartment houses in the States.

As the Rev. Harry Meadows (Meadowcroft was named for him) said: "In Alberta and especially here in Edmonton, nothing is too good for our seniors. That's why they run this building themselves." The projects are sponsored by the Alberta Provincial Department of Housing. Tenants pay $81 a month for a single room, $110 for a one-bedroom apartment. Officials said similar accommodations privately would cost $250-$300 a month.

Dear Abby

Seniors Should Write a Letter a Day

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Here is one woman who was delighted to read the letter signed, PREFERS SKIRTS!

I hate women in trousers! I never wear pants unless, of course, I plan to climb a tree.

Women who claim that pants are more comfortable must have been brainwashed by those money-hungry fashion designers.

And what kind of an excuse is, "They hide the runs in my stockings?"

And as for the excuse, "They keep my legs warm," a long dress will do the same thing. "Prefers Skirts" did deflate me somewhat, however. Men are always exceptionally nice to me. They always open doors for me and treat me with respect, and here I thought it was just me. Now I realize that perhaps it was because I was wearing a dress. Oh well, I don't care, as long as they keep doing it.

And by the way, Abby, you don't look very good in pants suits. I know, because I've seen you.

FEMININE

DEAR FEM: Sorry about that. I never wear pants suits for public appearances. However, I do wear them for climbing trees and traveling.

DEAR ABBY: I think my brother's wife has developed more than a casual interest in my husband. He and my brother have been best buddies for years, and we have been a friendly foursome ever since their marriage two years ago.

Agnes (not her real name) used to be a quiet, demure little thing, but lately she's become a flirty, aggressive little sexpot. She always has an off-color joke to tell, and lately she's been suggesting that we switch partners when we drive somewhere so she can sit next to my husband. That leaves me with my brother. (Big thrill?)

I notice Agnes pops in only when my husband is home, which indicates that she comes here to see him — not me.

Now she wants us to take our vacations together. I'm against it. My husband has given her no encouragement, whatsoever, and my brother either doesn't catch on or doesn't care.

How can I cool the foursome friendship without being obvious?

BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: What's wrong with being obvious? Tell your husband that you think Agnes has designs on him, and you'd like to head off trouble. Find another couple to get chummy with and slowly see less of Agnes and brother. And if Agnes suggests switching or vacationing together, graciously but firmly veto it.

DEAR ABBY: Fifteen years ago you wrote in your column that a retired person should write at least one personal letter a day. You said it would pay big dividends.

I took your advice, and it worked? Now, I correspond with at least a dozen old friends. The mail is the highlight of my day. Great medicine for an old man living alone!

I keep in touch with former schoolmates and some relatives who live far away. And at 81, I still have quite a few left. I even correspond with a 90-year-old lady who was my mother's housekeeper and has known me since I was a child.

Pass this on to your readers, Abby. It has done me a world of good, and it's worth mentioning from time to time.

GEORGE IN GA.

DEAR GEORGE: By George, I will!

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Humidify For Health; Economy

Unless your home is equipped with a humidifier, it will probably be twice as dry as the Sahara Desert during the winter.

This dire warning comes from the National Better Heating-Cooling Council which notes that during the winter the relative humidity in many homes is 13 percent or less while the average relative humidity of the Sahara Desert is 23 percent.

In the winter, the air in the average house changes completely every two hours or less. As this air — which is cold and dry — passes through the house, it is heated and becomes drier. Unless moisture is added to the air, the relative humidity drops.

There are important reasons why humidification is needed within the home. Medical authorities are agreed that dry air adds to the discomfort of upper respiratory diseases. Painted surfaces within the home tend to peel or crack; the glue in furniture dries out; and people suffer shocks from static electricity.

To overcome these problems it is best to add a central power humidifier to the home. These can be installed, notes the Council, regardless of the type of heating system in the home. Since a central power humidifier is connected to the water system, they do not require refilling. The humidifier air is discharged through a conveniently located grille. The best location for the grille is usually the bottom of a stairwell, but location is not too important. According to a scientific principle, moisture disperses itself evenly throughout the house.

Make sure your humidifier has its own humidistat which activates it when the house needs moisture. Humidifiers which are part of the heating system operate only when the thermostat calls for heat.

If you cannot afford a central humidifier, there are many portable or room-type models which may do a limited job. The Council endorses the theory that even a little moisture is better than none at all.

Adding A Room Costs Lot Less Than Moving 'Up'

For more space at home, add a room. It's cheaper than moving to a larger house, and the improvement will add to the value of your property.

Builders and building materials dealers report a lively business in room additions during this "tight money" period. They report also that a growing number of these additions are featuring hardboard siding. This type of siding, available in many patterns, textures and finishes, has proved popular with builders and home owners because its weatherability and durability have been established.

Masonite brand Bayside, a multi-level lap siding with a woody surface texture, is an exterior product that appeals to many. The 12" wide strips are 16 feet long, therefore can be applied quickly. Bayside can also be used for mansard roof applications.

For more information on hardboard sidings, send a postcard to the Masonite Home Service Bureau, Box B, Chicago, Ill. 60690.

Unused basement space becomes a spirited recreation area with an Irish Pub theme — thanks to some clever, but inexpensive decorating ideas from the interior designers at

Armstrong. Do-it-yourself floors, carpets, and ceilings thoughtfully combined with color and imagination produce a truly enchanting retreat for family and friends.

Hibernian Hideaway Is Stylishly Irish

You don't need the luck o' the Irish to turn an ordinary basement into an extraordinary rec room! What you do need is a little imagination plus some do-it-yourself ability.

Take a clue from the interior designers at Armstrong who planned this unusual family retreat around a St. Patrick's Day theme.

To capture the cozy spirit of an Irish pub, they used a variety of Armstrong products — plus numerous decorating

"tricks" — to carry out their creative ideas.

The handsome vinyl-asbestos tile floor started this magical transformation. (Somehow when a new floor is added to a room, decoration almost suggests itself, and the whole room becomes alive of its own accord.)

The rich flooring, which harmonizes so well with the wall paneling, is easy-to-install Place 'n Press Excelon tile in the Oak Knoll design. Kelly green indoor-outdoor carpet by decks (or "dis-carded") cards; here we see them mounted and framed to make decorative wall hangings.

Armstrong separates the dining area. (Note how the carpet is also used as a vibrant wallcovering around the fireplace.)

For economy and versatility, the game/dining table is a whiskey barrel topped with stained plywood and edged with filigreed stock brass trim. Chairs are second-hand, spray-painted. More color is served with friendly warmth in the heather pink chair cushions and headrests.

Good use is made of odd

Two sculptured braces enhance the charm of Armstrong's Colonial Sampler Chandelier ceiling and visually separate the dining area from the sitting room. Along with molded urethane beams, there is a combination of interesting textures overhead. Wood dowels attached to the bar ceiling hold stemmed glasses, and recessed lighting creates a shimmering effect on the crystal.

Another do-it-yourself feature includes the re-embroidered fabric borders which are stretched over a plywood frame outlining the tiny casement windows, making them look deceptively large. With lacy curtains hanging below, the Irish fantasy is complete. To coordinate the room scheme, the same fabric border which was used at the windows is also sewn onto the sofa slipcovers. Bar stools, cleverly, are terra cotta drain pipes mushroom-topped with cushions over pegged wooden tops.

The Irish personality of the room comes from appropriate accessories. Clay pipes on a wall . . . shamrock-patterned china . . . equestrian art . . . all correlate with the room's mood.

Even the narrow wall space separating the two areas is accessorized attractively with oversized kitchen utensils. It's all in keeping with the increasingly popular "country" ethnic look.

Green-and-white-and-Irish-all-over — this room looks like a leprechaun unearthed a treasure trove of ideas!

Lack of space in a home doesn't have to put a damper on family living.

Follow the lead from the designers at Armstrong.

Fix Stuck Disposer This Way

Chicago (NFS) — Garbage disposers are built to take a lot of punishment. However, if a hard object such as a paper clip or bobby pin accidentally falls into the unit, a jam will probably occur.

According to Ernest J. Prialux, vice president-consumer product service for the In-Sink-Erator Division, Emerson Electric Co., Racine, Wis., the principle of operation of a disposer is a simple one:

"In very basic terms, a round metal turntable inside the mouth of the disposer rotates at more than 1,700 revolutions per minute," Prialux said.

THIS ACTION causes the food waste resting on the table to be flung against the inner wall of the disposer. Here a circular shredding ring actually shreds the food waste until the particles are small enough to be flushed to the drain line connection below.

"A hard metal object falling between the rotating table and the outer shredding ring will halt the table and cause a jammed condition."

Here's what Prialux recommends you do about it:

1. FIRST, MAKE certain that the switch for your disposer is in the off position.

2. Reach in the disposer and remove the object, if possible. There are no knives or blades inside, just the rotating table and the outer shredding ring.

3. If your disposer comes with a self-service wrenchette, fit it into a socket under the disposer and work the rotating table back and forth until the jam is free.

4. FOR OTHER makes, use a broom handle and insert it through the drain opening so that the end of the handle is touching one of the projections on the rotating table. Then pry with a steady but strong pressure, first in one direction and then in the other until the jam is free.

5. After the jam is free, press the small red reset button, normally located on the bottom of the appliance.

Prialux stated that if the jam persists after these measures are tried, it's time to call a local disposer service agency.

Planning A New Bathroom?

What is the most used room in the home—and often, the most neglected? The bathroom.

No other room contributes so much per square foot to the quality of life for a family. More and more home-owners, becoming aware of this fact, are starting to remodel existing baths, and in many cases, adding second or third ones. How do you plan baths that grow with your family's needs? How can you find space for that needed powder room?

And finally, what are the most contemporary ideas in modern plumbing— fixtures, materials, designs and colors?

These questions and many more are answered in a combined design kit and planning guide book from American-Standard.

A feature of the kit is a 32-page brochure, "So you're Planning a Bathroom," . . . that colorfully illustrated many sample bathrooms and offers solutions to all the problems encountered in bathroom planning and remodeling.

The kit can be ordered from American-Standard, P.O. Box 2019, New Brunswick, New Jersey 08903, for $1.00.

Steelers take AFC title with 16-10 victory Sunday. (UPI)

Staubach and Pearson Too Much

By JIM COUR
UPI Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Roger Staubach, who won the Heisman Trophy in glory-filled college days, and Preston Pearson, who never even played college football, teamed to carry the Dallas Cowboys into the Super Bowl.

"We've been the underdog all season," said Staubach. "That's the difference from before. People always expected us to go to the Super Bowl before. They didn't this season."

The scrambling former Heisman Trophy winner from Navy was at his best Sunday, passing for four touchdowns — three of them to Pittsburgh Steelers castoff Pearson — in a 37-7 upset romp over the Los Angeles Rams.

at Miami, Jan. 18.

"I certainly never expected we'd be able to dominate a good football team like the Rams the way that we did," said Tom Landry, the 16-year Dallas coach whose team went into the game as a six-point underdog. "It just seemed to be our day."

"I honestly thought there was no way we weren't going to the Super Bowl," all-pro defensive end Jack Youngblood of the Rams said. "I had no doubts we would be in Miami — even with our injuries. But our luck ran out."

Staubach teamed with Pearson for an 18-yard touchdown on a screen pass in the opening quarter after line-backer D.D. Lewis intercepted a James Harris aerial.

In the second period, Staubach found Golden Richards all by himself in the end zone with a four-yard pass and Pearson later made a brilliant, diving catch of a 15-yard throw for another score.

Just 5:55 into the second half, Staubach surprised the Rams with a shovel pass to Pearson for a 19-yard touchdown.

Austrian Toni Fritsch finished the Rams off with field goals of 40, 26 and 26 yards.

"This was the most meaningful game I've ever had," said Pearson, a nine-year pro veteran who signed with the Cowboys as a free agent after being cut by the Steelers. Pearson played basketball at Illinois.

"I was scared to death when the game started. But I take pride in being able to play under pressure."

"As far as I'm concerned," lauded Staubach, "Preston has been the key to our season."

Staubach completed 16 of 26 passes for 220 yards against a defense that surrendered an NFL-low 135 regular season points. He also scrambled seven times for 54 yards.

"Staubach is a great one," managed a downcast Chuck Knox, the Rams' head coach who now has failed three straight years to get his club to the Super Bowl.

"Staubach's the best... he's definitely the best," said Youngblood, who had heated words with the Cowboys' quarterback in the second half.

"Youngblood was a little frustrated," explained Staubach. "I got mad when I thought he hit me late. We bitched back and forth a little."

"Roger has had some great games over the years with us," noted Landry. "This was one of his best, but I don't know if I could say it was his greatest game ever."

After making the playoffs for eight straight years, the Cowboys missed last season. Landry said the key to this season was an 18-7 upset over Rams at Dallas in September to open the regular season. The NFC title upset of the Rams came one week after the Cowboys had shocked the Minnesota Vikings, 17-14, in the ice at Bloomington.

"That gave us a lot of confidence," Landry said. "We knew we could beat other good teams and keep ourselves in contention."

The Dallas defense played a marvelous game against Los Angeles. The Cowboys held Lawrence McCutcheon to 10 yards rushing only one week after he set a playoff record by running for 202 yards against St. Louis.

They intercepted the Rams three times, two by Lewis, and sacked quarterback Ron Jaworski five times for a total of 51 yards. Dallas line-backer Tom Henderson blocked a 34-yard field goal attempt by Tom Dempsey in the first quarter with the Rams trailing only 7-0.

The key to the game, according to Lewis, a seven-year pro from Mississippi State, was holding McCutcheon in check.

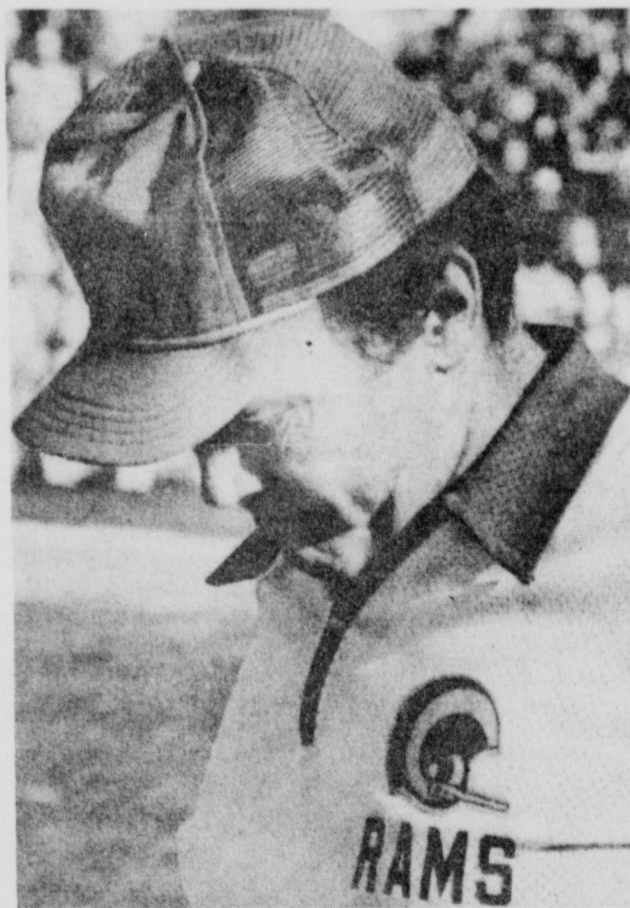

"Against Minnesota," said Lewis, "the key was to stopping Chuck Foreman. Against the Rams, we felt we had a good chance if we stopped Lawrence McCutcheon. So we geared our game plan to stop him."

"I never thought there could be any team that could score four touchdowns against us," said Youngblood. "And I never thought there could be any team that could hold us scoreless for three quarters."

The Rams averted a shutout in the last period on a one-yard touchdown plunge by John Cappelletti.

Sunday Was Different

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — When Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw suffered a shoulder separation playing in Three Rivers Stadium two seasons ago, he left the game under a chorus of ugly boos.

But when Bradshaw was knocked out late in the fourth quarter of the Steelers' AFC title game with Oakland Sunday, the thousands of black-and-gold clad fans in the stands hurt with him.

"BRAD-shaw, BRAD-shaw, BRAD-shaw," the standing crowd pleaded in unison as he lay on the ground after taking a blow to the head, later described as a mild concussion, at the end of a 13-yard scramble.

The fans broke out in a wild chorus of cheers when Bradshaw struggled to his feet and again when he headed shakily for the locker room as his teammates played out the clock in the 16-10 victory that sent them to their second straight Super Bowl.

Despite his wooziness, Bradshaw noted the fans' reaction with pleasure and gratitude.

"I got hit in the jaw near the end and everything just went blank for a few seconds," he said haltingly, struggling to concentrate. "The crowd reaction was nice. I've been on the other side of the fence so I know how it is."

Weather, Steelers Chill Raiders

By RICK GOSSELIN
UPI Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A 15-degree temperature and a 17-mile an hour wind combined to freeze a few fingers and toes Sunday in the American Football Conference Championship game between the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Oakland Raiders.

The Steelers, however, get a chance to thaw out in Miami next week. The Raiders, for the fourth straight year, must remain out in the cold until next December when the National Football League again conducts its annual playoff lottery for the right to appear in the Super Bowl.

Pittsburgh unleashed a devastating defensive chill to match what nature had in store for the two AFC title game participants when its vaunted "Steel Curtain" defensive unit forced five turnovers and kept Oakland scoreless for almost 48 minutes in giving the Steelers a 16-10 victory and a second consecutive Super Bowl appearance.

Pittsburgh will meet NFC champion Dallas Jan. 18 in Super Bowl X at Miami's Orange Bowl. The Cowboys destroyed host Los Angeles 37-7 Sunday in the NFC title game.

Linebacker Jack Lambert recovered a playoff record three fumbles and safety Mike Wagner intercepted two passes to help stymie the potent Oakland attack while quarterback Terry Bradshaw was warming up the Pittsburgh offense.

"Turnovers decided it," said Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler, who had a dismal nine for 25 passing performance for 102 yards through three quarters before catching fire in the fourth period to rally his team. "Big games are decided by big plays and we didn't make enough of them."

The Pittsburgh defense made all the big plays, highlighted by the performance of Lambert, who killed one second half Oakland drive at the Pittsburgh 20 and another at the Steeler 30.

Lambert's second fumble recovery at the Pittsburgh 30 set up Franco Harris' 25-yard touchdown run early in the fourth quarter to give the Steelers a 10-0 lead. His third fumble recovery at the Oakland 21 enabled Pittsburgh to score its second touchdown on a 20-yard pass from Terry Bradshaw to John Stallworth.

On both touchdowns, rookie defensive back Neal Colzie was the goat, failing to keep Harris inside on an aborted off-tackle play and falling down in the end zone while Stallworth was leaping for what proved to be the winning touchdown grab.

"It was going to be a difficult pass to catch," said Stallworth of his touchdown. "I knew I'd have to jump for it...he (Colzie) just made it a whole lot easier for me by falling down."

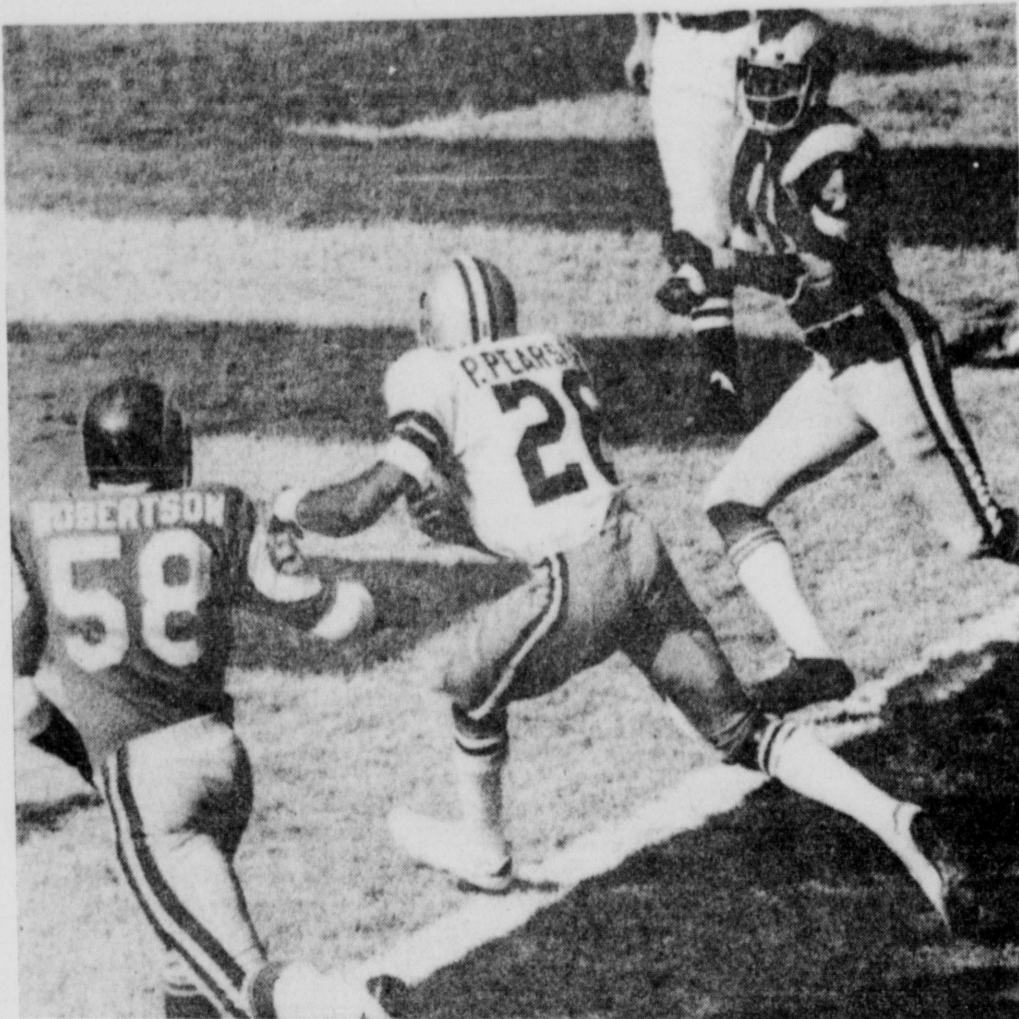

Mei Blount, who led the NFL in interceptions this season with 11, did a remarkable job in shutting off Cliff Branch, who didn't catch a pass until just 1:11 remained in the game. Branch, who led the Raiders with nine regular season TD receptions, almost did the Steelers in with his second and final catch of the game at the Pittsburgh 15 as time ran out.

That 37-yard reception came the first play after the Raiders recovered an onside kick following George Blanda's longest field goal of the season (41 yards) to pull Oakland within six points with just 12 seconds left in the game.

"When they recovered that kick," Lambert said, "People didn't realize how close we were to losing. But Mel (Blount) played it perfectly. He let Branch catch the ball and then tackled him before he could get out of bounds. If there was interference giving them the ball that deep in our zone, who knows what might have happened."

"It's just so tough," said Raider linebacker Phil Villapiano, who was hit with a costly 15-yard penalty for unnecessary roughness during the Steelers' initial touchdown drive. "It seems like every year it happens to us some way or other. I still think we're a great ball club. When we were down at the 15 and time ran out, you just had to wonder why we weren't there all day."

"We had all the confidence in the world that we'd win today. I don't think we were ever more ready. We had them, but we let them score twice on third-and-10 and that was it. It's just so, so tough to take every year. But we'll come back and some day we're gonna do it."

The Elusive Mr. Pearson

Lambert Was the Story

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Just one look at Jack Lambert told the story of Sunday's Oakland-Pittsburgh American Conference title game.

Lambert's right hand was a crimson mess, his knuckles swollen almost twice their size. His bright gold pants were covered with blood. The arms of his thermal undershirt were streaked and smeared. There were two huge welts across his face.

But Lambert was a contented man. Pittsburgh's second-year middle line-backer recovered a playoff record three Oakland fumbles to key a magnificent defensive effort that led the Steelers to a 16-10 victory over the Raiders and a second straight Super Bowl berth.

"It's a great satisfaction beating Oakland," said the man his teammates call, "the meanest man in football." "Oakland is one of the best teams in pro football. You know you've played well when you can beat a team of that caliber."

Lambert doesn't have any secret for recovering fumbles, though he always seems to be in the right place at the right time.

"Actually, I don't realize what happens or what goes into recovering fumbles," he explained. "You see the ball and you go get it. I don't think I'm especially good at it or anything. The key is simply pursuit. We get as many black jerseys as we can around the ball and if it pops loose, someone is bound to come up with it. This was one of the hardest hitting games I've ever played in my life. It seems like it's always Oakland that we really knock heads with."

Lambert's superb effort almost went to waste as Oakland scored on George Blanda's 41-yard field goal with just 12 seconds left to narrow the lead to 16-10 and then recovered an onside kick. But Ken Stabler's desperation pass from the Raider 45 was caught by Cliff Branch at the 15 but he was decked as time ran out.

"People don't realize just how close we came to losing that game," said Lambert. "My heart was beating—pounding, really—at the end. Kicking that field goal was just a brilliant call by their coach—it absolutely took me by surprise. I was so scared at the end. So many things could have happened. He could have slipped away. There could have been an interference. God, was I happy when it was over."

Lambert was one of the few Steelers who wasn't bothered by the icy 15-degree temperature.

"I've never minded playing in the cold," he explained. "I'm from Ohio (Kent State) and it gets pretty cold there. Actually, I think it's all in your mind. You condition yourself to block out the weather factor and just concentrate on what you're doing out there."

"The field was pretty bad, though. It looked like a hockey rink or something. I've never seen it so bad. It was surprising. They usually take good care of it."

Despite his bloody appearance, Lambert seemed less bothered by it than the onlookers who were cringing.

"It's a tough game, a very tough game," he said with a faint smile. "Bloodshed is a part of it. It doesn't hurt as much when you win."

Turnovers Proved Fatal

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Phil Villapiano stood in the corner of a solemn Oakland Raider dressing room. The frustration was written all over his face.

"It's just so tough," said Oakland's All Pro line-backer after the Raiders had lost to the Pittsburgh Steelers 16-10 Sunday in the American Conference title game. "It seems like every year it happens to us some way or other. I still think we're a great ballclub. When we were down at their 15 and time ran out, you had to wonder why we weren't there all day."

Villapiano keyed a mighty Oakland defensive effort that kept Pittsburgh's high powered offense under wraps most of the afternoon. But turnovers in the icy 15-degree weather proved fatal to the Raiders, who were eliminated in the playoffs for the sixth time in the last seven years.

"We had all the confidence in the world that we'd win today," Villapiano said. "I don't think we were ever more ready. We had them, but we let them score twice on third and 10 and that was it. It's just so, so tough to take every year, but we'll come back and someday we're gonna do it."

"We worked hard all week. We knew what they were going to do and we were stopping them. Don't take anything away from those guys—that's one helluva ball team—but we were just as good today. Maybe if we had just a little more time...but then isn't that always the story?"

Villapiano was referring to a desperation pass by Ken Stabler to Cliff Branch after Oakland had pulled to within 16-10 on George Blanda's 41-yard field goal with 12 seconds left and then recovered akk onside kick. Branch caught the ball at the Steeler 15 and was belted down as time ran out. Villapiano also had his own frustration, a hotly contested personal foul call that enabled Pittsburgh to drive to its first touchdown and a 10-0 lead.

Terry Bradshaw threw a short pass to John Stallworth, who made a diving catch. A Raider defender went sliding by Stallworth as the Steeler receiver rose to run. Villapiano slammed Stallworth into the frozen artificial turf and was penalized 15 yards for a late hit.

"I'm not stupid enough to hit a guy when he's down," he explained. "I didn't know if he was down. There was no whistle and the guy got up and started to run. There were two refs standing right there and they didn't drop a flag. Then this guy (Pat Mallette) who wasn't even close to the play comes out of left field and says I hit him late. I didn't think it was a very good call. It hurt us and I feel bad about it. They went in and scored. Maybe we could have stopped them."

Stallworth actually agreed with Villapiano. "Actually, I didn't know what happened on the play," he said. "I caught the ball on the ground and I got up and started to run. I got hit from behind and I went down. It wasn't anything special—it didn't hurt or anything. I didn't even know that was the penalty."

Villapiano feels the Steelers will repeat as Super Bowl champions.

"I have all the confidence in the world that they'll win," he said. "There's not a National League team that can stay with them. That's one helluva team. They hang together. They're good, man, just good."

He shook his head and smiled. The frustration of what could have been was all over his face.

Roger Credits The 'Shotgun'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Cucumber-cool Roger Staubach credited Dallas' shotgun or spread formation plus a little luck Sunday for the Cowboys' 37-7 win over the Los Angeles Rams and a berth in Super Bowl X.

In a dressing room raucous with yells "yee-ow" and "we did it," Staubach and Coach Tom Landry were calm but obviously happy over the victory.

Landry, grinning ear to ear, said, "It just seemed to be our day. Everything fell in place for us. There's no way we're that much better than the Rams. Preston Pearson was fantastic. Staubach had one of his greatest days."

Staubach said he kept watching the sidelines when the Cowboys had the ball on third down to see what players the Rams would send in to change their defense.

"They were changing up on us a lot," said the husky quarterback. "Third down is the toughest down in this league. The spread gives me more time to find receivers."

"We kept calling the spread on third down and hit on a few key pass plays. That's why we won. I just think we were fortunate. Our defense played well. If we played the Rams against next week, it could be turned around."

On the second Dallas touchdown when Staubach found wide receiver Golden Richards all alone in the middle of the end zone and flipped a pass to him, Staubach said, "it was a play action pass. They played run and we passed. That's all there was to it. Their safety blitzed and Golden was uncovered."

Preston Pearson, the running back who was cut loose by the Pittsburgh Steelers and picked up by Dallas as a free agent at the start of the season, was another ear-to-ear grinner.

"This is the most meaningful game and season I've ever had," said the 30-year-old former Illinois University basketball star. "I can't tell you how good I feel inside for making a contribution for the Cowboys."

Pearson, known as "the other Pearson," because of the more prominent Dallas wide receiver Drew Pearson, scored three touchdowns on passes from Staubach.

Preston Pearson did not play football in college but was drafted in an experimental choice by the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League. He was on a special team for the Colts when they lost to the New York Jets in the 1968 Super Bowl. He played briefly last year when the Steelers won the championship.

He said he had no resentment against the Steelers for letting him go.

"Thmse guys are my friends," he said. "I've known most of them for five years. But once you get on the football field, it's war. I'll play my game in the Super Bowl and they'll play theirs."

Staubach gave the Rams credit in an indirect way for giving the Cowboys impetus at the beginning of the 1975 season.

"The opening game was a key game for us because we're a young team," he explained. "And when we beat the Rams (18-7) in that opener, it gave us confidence."

Staubach and Ram defensive end Jack Youngblood exchanged some hot words during the last few minutes of the game Sunday but the Dallas quarterback laughed off the apparent dispute.

He said, "Youngblood was a little frustrated and I got mad when I thought he hit me after the play was over. We bitched back and forth a little."

With an impish smile, he added, "I sure don't want to say anything bad to him off the football field."

Pearson and Cowboys A Very Happy Marriage

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Running back Preston Pearson was set loose by Pittsburgh and waived by every other team in the National Football League last September. But the Dallas Cowboys suddenly needed help because of injuries and they grabbed him.

The union was a happy one and reached a climax of sorts Sunday when Pearson, the 30-year-old former Illinois University basketball star, caught three touchdown passes from Roger Staubach in a 37-7 win over the Los Angeles Rams.

The Rams were favored by one touchdown but were never really in the game.

Pearson was drafted by the Baltimore Colts in an admitted experiment since he did not play football in college. He appeared undyingly grateful to the Cowboys for picking him up and said after the Ram win:

"This is the most meaningful game and season I've ever had. I can't tell you how good I feel inside for making a contribution to the Cowboys."

Pearson scored on passes good for 18, 15 and 19 yards but all were rather short and he had to do some running to get into the end zone. The third pass was a shovel of only a few feet from Staubach behind the line of scrimmage and Preston rambled around his left end to get to paydirt.

"I got to give the line credit," he said, "for good blocking but I have to say I can run well when I get the chance."

Pearson is a durable 6-1 205-pounder and up to now has been known as the "other Pearson" because he was overshadowed by the wide receiver Drew of the same surname.

He has had, like the Dallas veterans, some Super Bowl experience with both Baltimore and Pittsburgh.

Pearson is the only player on the Dallas squad who has played with a team other than the Cowboys in the NFL.

Sabres Coach Feels for the Flyers

By UPI

It isn't often you can get Buffalo Sabres Coach Floyd Smith to sympathize with the arch-rival Philadelphia Flyers.

However, Smith says his heart goes out to the defending Stanley Cup champion Flyers when they play host to a touring Russian hockey team Jan. 11.

"My heart's with the Flyers, believe it or not," Smith said after his Sabres drubbed the Wings of Moscow, 12-6, Sunday.

The Flyers meet the Russian Army team, the other touring Soviet team, but the Sabres became the first National Hockey League team to beat either of the Russian Clubs.

"I thought the difference was in our skating," Smith said. "When there was a race (Rick Martin and (Gil) Perreault could pull away from them."

Martin and Perreault had played on the 1972 Team Canada club against the Soviets, but both left the team early in the series due to lack of playing time. On Sunday, however, they played like they had something to prove, Martin getting two goals and three assists and Perreault a goal and two assists.

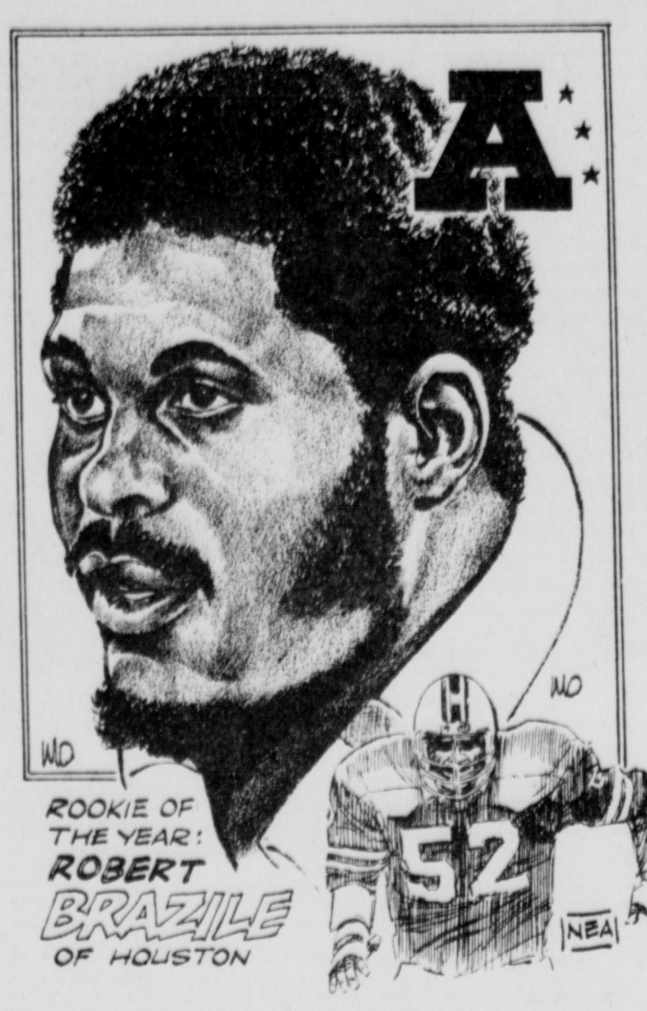

"We worked a little harder," said Martin. "It was worth all the hard work we did this week. It's also a matter of pride. We are the National Hockey League and we're supposed to be the best in the world."

The Sabres came out quick, taking a 3-0 first period lead on goals by Josh Guevremont, Perreault and Martin and increased the lead to 6-2 in the second stanza on goals by Jim Lorentz and Rene Robert before Repnyev got his second for the Wings.

Buffalo's Gerry Korab and the Wings' Victor Schalimov traded goals before scores by Buffalo's Danny Gare and Peter McNab gave the Sabres a 9-4 lead after two periods.

In regular-season NHL action Sunday, Philadelphia downed the New York Islanders, 5-3; Vancouver edged Detroit, 4-3; Toronto outlasted the New York Rangers, 8-6, and Chicago put away Pittsburgh, 5-3.

Bartkowski, Brazile Top Rookies

By Murray Olderman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — There is, after all, a raison d'être for all those fancy scouting systems in professional football — Blesto, Cepo, Quadra, Galaxy — to which 25 of the 28 teams in the National Football League belong.

Last January, Cepo, a seven-team scouting combine, certified Steve Bartkowski of the University of California as the top college prospect in the United States, which led Atlanta to pick him first in the draft.

At the same time, Galaxy, which enrolls four teams, among them Houston, convinced the Oilers that their top pick in the draft should be Robert Brazile, a mobile linebacker from Jackson State University.

Those judgments have today been vindicated by the selection of Steve Bartkowski and Robert Brazile as winners of the Bert Bell Memorial Trophy as rookies of the year in the National and American Football Conferences, respectively. The final voting was conducted by Newspaper Enterprise Association.

They received their trophies on Jan. 3 at a luncheon hosted by Shulton, Inc., in Los Angeles, the makers of Old Spice, which conducted preliminary national balloting for the five finalists in each conference. The awards were also announced by John Unitas during the NFC Championship Playoff Game and Bartkowski and Brazile each were presented with a 1976 Chrysler Cordoba automobile. The eight other finalists each received engraved digital watches.

Barely 18 months ago, Steve Bartkowski had decided he was through with football, that he would never play again, that his future was slugging a baseball. He had finished his junior year at the University of California as a second string quarterback behind Vince Ferragamo (now at the University of Nebraska). He skipped spring practice to concentrate on a baseball career.

But Steve, like a lot of guys before him going all the way back to Jim Thorpe, found out he couldn't hit the curve. Coach Mike White at California felt that Bartkowski was still an outstanding football talent and in July, 1974, he was persuaded to turn out for the California varsity again in the fall. Almost at the same time, Ferragamo transferred to Nebraska and big (6-4, 215) Bart was all California had to play quarterback. The results were sensational as he passed for 2,580 yards and was a unanimous All-American selection.

With the Falcons this fall, he immediately established himself as the regular quarterback once the season began and, although handicapped by an injury to his left elbow which kept him out of several games, he was the difference between a team which floundered when he wasn't on the field and could play equally with any power in the NFL when he was directing the Atlanta attack.

The statistics were impressive enough as he threw for 1,662 yards and 13 touchdowns, but beyond them he was, despite his inexperience, an inspirational leader for the Falcons and the best first year quarterback this observer has seen in 25 years.

His closest voting competition for NFC rookie honors came from a couple of smallish running backs, Mike Thomas of Washington and Willard Harrell of Green Bay.

Robert Brazile came into pro football with a lot less attention than Bartkowski, although his credentials were just as respectable.

At Jackson State, the touted player was Walter Payton, the running back drafted first by the Chicago Bears, and a good one. But Brazile was also considered "can't miss" when he was picked as the Oilers' top choice. An early injury to veteran linebacker Duane Benson gave Brazile (pronounced the same as the country) his chance. He was never moved out.

"There was never a doubt about Robert," says Ed Biles, the Oilers' defensive coach. "He's played outstanding football every game. He's got good intelligence, good movement."

He also has size, 6-4 and 230, and has been timed in a phenomenal 4.6 for the 40-yard dash.

In the Oilers' unique 3-4 defense, which deploys four linebackers, Brazile as an outside man had dual responsibility against the run and the pass and demonstrated fine coverage while preserving his reputation as a rugged tackler.

A pair of defensive specialists, corner back and punt return ace Neal Colzie of the Oakland Raiders and tackle Louis Kelcher of the San Diego Chargers, also figured strongly in the AFC voting.

The winning selections were made by a panel of NFL team captains and coaches.

The Bert Bell Trophy for rookie of the year was inaugurated in 1964 by Newspaper Enterprise Association. The very first winner was Charley Taylor of the Washington Redskins. He has just become the most prolific pass receiver in the history of pro football.

Close One for St. John's Redmen

By UPI

St. John's almost got a taste of its own medicine Saturday.

The 11th ranked Redmen, who came close of upsetting top-ranked Indiana last week in the Holiday Festival Tournament, came close to being upset themselves Saturday night before downing St. Joseph's (Pa.) 75-62.

In other games involving New York State college basketball clubs, W. Virginia blasted Syracuse 97-75, Virginia Tech humbled St. Bonaventure 115-74, Maryland bombed Long Island University 111-88 and Siena edged Union 69-64.

In the Lafayette Invitational Tournament, host Lafayette downed Army 74-61 in the championship game while New Hampshire topped Rochester 80-72 in the consolation game.

St. John's had trouble getting their offense untracked in the early going but built up a 20-point lead once they regrouped midway through the second half. The Redmen were paced by 13-point efforts from George Johnson and Cecil Bellford.

West Virginia got 23 points from Stan Boskovich in their win over Syracuse as the Orangemen ended a four-game winning streak. Dale Shackleford paced Syracuse with 17. Second-ranked Maryland got 28 points from Steve Sheppard and 26 from guard John Lucas as LIU could not keep up with the Terrapins running game. Ernie Douse paced LIU with 32 points.

Larry Cooke hit for 25 points as Virginia Tech out-rebounded St. Bonaventure 60-29. Glenn Hagan paced the Bonnies with 17 points.

In other games, Pitt romped over Buffalo 83-65; RPI ripped Albany St. 79-65; Canisius edged Fairfield 72-70; and

King's College topped Le-Moyne 75-69.

It was Gannon over St. Francis (N.Y.) 70-63; Hofstra squeaked by Iona 75-74; Southamton got by Brooklyn 76-71 and N.Y. Tech nipped Adelphi 70-69.

Lanier Out for Month

DETROIT (UPI) — The Detroit Pistons, already reeling from the effects of key injuries, will have to get along without star center Bob Lanier for about a month.

The burly 6-foot-10 Lanier learned Sunday he has a fractured left shoulder, suffered Saturday night in Detroit's 104-100 victory over Cleveland. His arm has been placed in a sling and he will be lost to the National Basketball Association team for a minimum three weeks.

"I'm not surprised it happened, the way they've been pounding on him in there," said Detroit Coach Ray Scott, who will go with Earl Williams, rookie Lindsay Hairston and George Trapp at center in place of the Pistons' leading scorer and rebounder.

Lanier, third member of the starting five Detroit opened the season with to be felled by injury, is averaging 21.4 points plus 12 rebounds a game. He is among the top 10 in four of the NBA's statistical categories.

Teams had been ganging up on the Pistons' main man ever since sparkplug guard Kevin Porter and his running mate, John Mengelt, were injured in the same game. Both suffered knee injuries Dec. 9 at Golden State.

Mengelt missed 11 games before returning with a heavily taped knee, but Porter underwent surgery and his effectiveness when he returns near the end of the regular season has to be questionable.

In addition, replacement guard Wali Jones played only one game for Detroit and suffered a knee injury which will idle him for another couple of weeks.

Detroit had just begun playing good basketball when Porter and Mengelt were hurt and that sent the Pistons into a tailspin from which they haven't recovered.

The club has lost 13 of 17 games and Milwaukee finally wrested first place in the Midwest Division from Detroit last week after the Pistons had held it since Nov. 5. The division has the worst record in the league.

"We won't try to get anybody else while Bob's out," Scott said. "We can do it. This type of thing happens in sports. We'll just have to get along."

There's A New Kid on the Block In Atlantic Coast Conference

By UPI

There's a new kid on the block on "Tobacco Road" and he plans on making big trouble for the ruling class.

Of the four universities that comprise the state of North Carolina's "Tobacco Road" basketball contingent in the Atlantic Coast Conference, the one that has been down-trodden the most over the past decade has been Wake Forest.

The Deacons, who have had only three winning seasons since 1964, never had been able to keep up either with North Carolina State, North Carolina or Duke when it came to landing recruits. That is, until Carl Tacy came on the scene three seasons ago.

No longer are the Deacons the laughing stock of the ACC. Under Tacy, Wake Forest has slowly developed into a power that is beginning to gain some recognition nationally.

Although unranked despite a perfect record, the Deacons proved last weekend they belong somewhere among the top 10 teams when they upset third-ranked North Carolina and eighth-ranked North Carolina State on successive nights to win the Big Four Tournament at Raleigh, N.C., for the second straight year.

The two victories left the Deacons with a 10-0 record, their best start since 1927.

"I felt they should have been rated before they came here," said dejected Coach Norm

Sloan of North Carolina State. "They will be now, I'm sure, and justifiably so. They're a very fine team."

"We thought we should have been ranked when we were 80," said Schellenberg. "But we knew we didn't play as tough a schedule as some other teams. But I think we should be in the top 10 now."

Another team that has been overlooked in the ratings is West Texas State. The un-ranked Buffaloes upset ninth-ranked Louisville, 84-78, in overtime Saturday night to raise their record to 9-1 and should crack the top 20 this week. The Buffaloes' Reggie Ramey sent the game into overtime with a jump shot with six seconds left and Brad Schreck scored four points and intercepted two passes in overtime to spark the victory.

In other games involving top-ranked teams, No. 1 Indiana edged Ohio State 66-64, No. 2 Maryland crushed Long Island University 111-88, No. 4 UCLA defeated No. 6 Notre Dame 86-70, No. 5 Marquette defeated South Carolina 82-70, No. 7 Alabama whipped Vanderbilt 83-66 and Nevada Las-Vegas, tied with Louisville for No. 9, edged Pan American 100-95.

Indiana was pushed to the limit against Ohio State but remained unbeaten in 10 games as All-America Scott May scored 24 points and Kent Benson added 23. The heavily-favored Hoosiers never led by more than six points and twice trailed. The score was tied 17 times.

Steve Sheppard scored 28 points and All-America guard John Lucas added 26 to lead Maryland to its 10th consecutive victory. Maryland's 6-foot-11 freshman center, Larry Gibson, had 16 points and 12 rebounds while Ernie Douse led LIU with 32 points.

UCLA, which hasn't lost since its opener against Indiana, played what Coach Gene Bartow called "our best game" in thrashing Notre Dame. Richard Washington, hitting on 11 of 16 field goal attempts, led the Bruins with 24 points while All-America Adrian Dantley had 25 for Notre Dame.

Lloyd Walton had 24 points and Earl Tatum chipped in with 22 in helping Marquette raise its record to 8-1. Marquette opened up a 47-31 halftime lead and was never challenged by the Gamecocks, who dropped to 6-4. Nate Davis led the Gamecocks with 22 points.

Leon Douglas scored 26 points to lead Alabama to its eighth victory in nine games. Douglas also pulled down 12 rebounds as the Crimson Tide opened their Southeastern Conference season in convincing fashion. Jeff Fomes scored 22 points to pace Vanderbilt. Nevada-Las Vegas, the nation's top offensive team, ran its record to 13-0 behind the sharp-shooting of Sam Smith and Robert Smith. Sam had 28 points and Robert added 16 to pick up the slack from Eddie Ownes, the Rebels' leading scorer who was held to five points. Marshall Rogers, the nation's leading scorer, scored 29 points for Pan American but managed only six points in the second half.

Elsewhere, 7-foot James Edwards scored 25 points to lead No. 11 Washington to a 106-75 victory over Seattle; St. John's (NY), also ranked No. 11, defeated St. Joseph's (Pa.) 75-62; Ernie Grunfeld got 25 points to lead No. 13 Tennessee to a 79-73 triumph over Georgia and Rickey Green tallied 20 points in pacing No. 15 Michigan to an 82-72 triumph over Northwestern.

Also, David Marrs and Cecil Rose scored 23 points apiece in pacing No. 17 San Francisco to a 94-73 rout of Houston; Bruce King scored a career high 32 points to lead No. 13 Iowa to an 84-60 victory over Illinois and Kyle Macy also hit his career high, 38 points, to help Purdue upset No. 19 Minnesota, 111-110 in double overtime. It was Minnesota's first loss in nine starts.

Another Jabbar Lesson For Frustrated Walton

By UPI

Portland's Bill Walton had two fine spots from which to view Los Angeles' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar Sunday night.

One was from inside the pivot where Jabbar, a fellow alumnus from UCLA, continued to teach Walton lessons in dunking, hooking and rebounding.

The other was from the bench, where Walton was forced to sit after getting himself in foul trouble trying to guard the 7-foot-2 Jabbar. The lessons learned there were somewhat more subtle.

Neither spot proved very enjoyable for the 6-11 redhead.

In another typical game for him, Abdul-Jabbar scored 39 points and grabbed 15 rebounds in leading the Lakers to a 110-101 victory and helping them snap a four-game losing streak. Abdul-Jabbar hit 15 of 22 from the field.

Walton finished with 11 points and connected on only five of 17 shots from the field. Earlier this season, Jabbar had scored 48 and 41 points against Portland.

The Lakers overcame a four-point halftime deficit as guard Lucius Allen, another former Bruin, scored 17 of his 19 points in the second half. He and Abdul-Jabbar led a 21-2 blitz during a seven-minute stretch of the third period when the Lakers came from a 62-54 deficit to lead 75-64.

Guard Larry Steele led Portland with 30 points, a season high. Steele had been averaging only seven points a game. Portland played without starting guard Geoff Petrie and lost his replacement, rookie Lionel Hollins, in the second period with a hip pointer.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Kansas City beat Phoenix, 98-86, and Seattle stopped Golden State, 97-85. In the ABA, the New York Nets ripped Indiana, 119-98.

Kings 98, Suns 86

Ollie Johnson came off the bench late in the third quarter to spark Kansas City to 10 straight points and help the Kings break an 11-game losing streak. Johnson, who had six points during the streak, finished with 16, while guard Nate Archibald had 29 points and nine assists and center Sam Lacey hauled in 14 rebounds.

Sonics 97, Warriors 85

Reserve forward Mike Bantom keyed a second-half rally and Fred Brown blew the game open in the third quarter as Seattle snapped Golden State's three-game win streak. Bantom poured in 11 of his 13 points in the second quarter as the Sonics moved out to 51-40 halftime lead. The Sonics led 56-48 with 8:29 to play in the third quarter when Brown pumped in 10 straight points as the Sonics opened up a 66-48 lead.

After the outcome was decided, Warrior sharpshooter Rick Barry was ejected with 6:09 to play in the final period. Referee Tommy Nunez ruled that Barry had pushed him following a scramble for a rebound. Barry, held to just 12 points, was jeered loudly by the crowd of over 13,000 as he waited several minutes before departing to the locker room.

Nets 119, Pacers 98

New York centers Kim Hughes and Swen Nater combined for 17 points and 16 rebounds in the first half to spark the Nets. The win for New York was its sixth straight against the Pacers and eighth straight at home. Led by Brian Taylor's 12 points, New York took control of the game in the first quarter, opening up a 20-15 margin to 33-19 at the end of the period.

Italian Wins Slalom Race

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, West Germany (UPI) — Fausto Radici of Italy today won a men's World Cup slalom ski race from his countryman Piero Gros.

Defying an ice-coated course, Radici secured himself the victory in a two-heat aggregate time of 85.81 seconds. Radici had already topped the intermediary standings after the first run.

Gros, who was eighth after the first heat, finished as runner-up with a two-heat aggregate of 85.90 seconds.

Third place went to Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden with a two-run total of 86.23.

For Tuesday, Jan. 6, 1976

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This should be a very busy day, but do things so that you don't paint yourself into a corner. Plan carefully.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Activities and outside interests are apt to be accentuated today. Take care not to find yourself on too many committees.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is one of those days where you could have too many irons in the fire. Isolate your important goals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It would be unwise today to try to sell others on ideas you're not too sure of. If you make a pitch, know the facts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Take extra pains today in situations you're helping others to sort out. Take complicated matters one step at a time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will find today that not everyone you're associated with can be handled with the same techniques. Size up each one separately.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be careful today you don't let your projects overlap. Do the ones you can do thoroughly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Continue to keep a tight rein on the old checkbook and credit cards. Shop wisely so as not to get in a bind.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't be pressured into situations today where you feel you have to act against your better judgment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Rather than look for excuses today, face issues squarely. If you made a boner, fess up to it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Material conditions are likely to be a bit mixed for you today. Be extra prudent. It could put you on the plus side.

PUBLIC KISSING: (Q.) Why is kissing in public poor taste? I don't believe in puritan ethics. Kissing is a respectful way for a girl to show affection for a boy. Affection is not poor taste.

People are supposed to live up to their beliefs. Everyone has his or her own beliefs. What happened to freedom of speech, religion, belief and way of life. I am 17 years old and I am just as human as the next person. — Tired of Ethics in Texas (A.) Kissing is a private thing between you and another person. That is why I do not encourage boy-girl kissing in public.

There are many completely normal private things that you do, but not in public, for two main reasons:

First, your own modesty. If that doesn't bother you, you must consider the modesty of other people ("the next person," as you put it). Doing things before them that modesty or custom prevents them from doing in public disturbs them.

PUSHER: (Q.) I love this guy Manuel. He takes drugs and sells them. He is always in trouble with the cops. I don't take drugs anymore.

My mother and father don't like Manuel because they know about the drugs and the trouble. Also they don't like him because he's different from us.

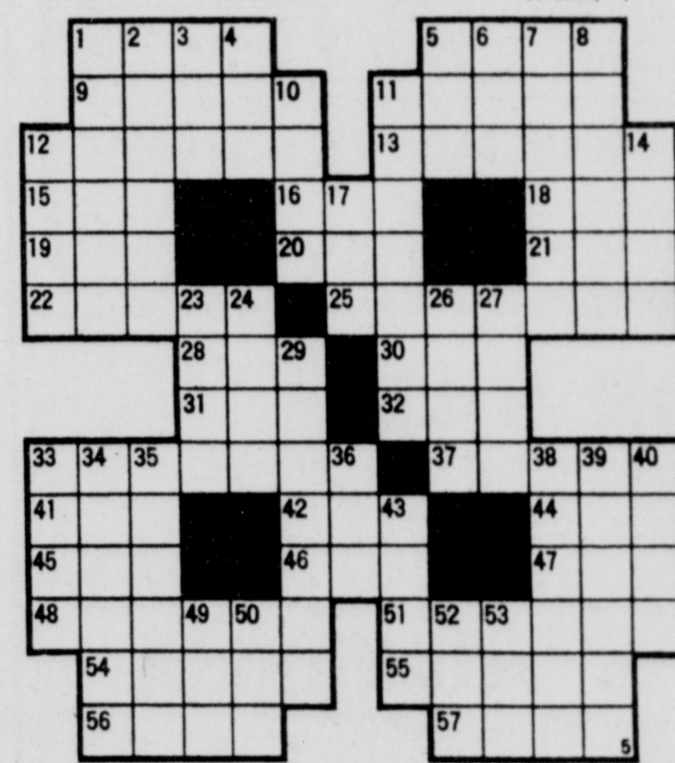

When I was 17 he asked me to move into an apartment with him. I said no. I'm 18 and I could leave. I want to and he wants me to. But I want to go with my parents' best wishes, not with them hating me. Please help me decide what to do. — Desperate in Pennsylvania

(A.) Manuel's differences in heritage and background are not important. They could be overcome. But his other differences — the drugs, the criminality — damage him. They may doom him. They will damage and perhaps doom you too if you join him. Love is not worth that.

Cousteau: A Child of the Universe

By Ira Berkow

NEW YORK (NEA)—Jacques Cousteau, the famed sea explorer, sat in a hotel dining room in Manhattan, a town he describes as a concrete booby-hatch. He wore an aqua-blue suit and took periodic sips from a close-by glass of water. The venerable mariner was obviously landsick.

He had come here perforce to promote his television sea special (on January 25). The conversation went on to coral reefs, the subject of his upcoming special, and how they devour each other; and a future project, the voyage to seek the lost continent of Atlantis.

He talked about the human qualities of dolphins—"if one breaks a rule, he is ostracized and then usually dies of a broken heart"; and the braininess of the sperm whale—"tops among non-human creatures"—and gave a little whistle of admiration, when suddenly he was interrupted.

A uniformed waiter had a delivery for Captain Cousteau. The small package was marked "urgent."

"I must see this or I will be for the whole time very anxious," said the gray-haired 65-year-old Frenchman, in a buoyant accent.

Cousteau fumbled with the tightly taped package. His sinewy hands with neatly trimmed nails are smallish and lean and surprisingly delicate, suggestive of his over-all aspect.

Two spools of film were in the box. Cousteau held one up to the window. He stuck his generous nose and thin-rimmed glasses closer; his face grew grave. "I cannot believe this," he said.

He began flicking swiftly at the serpentine film. As he watched it flit by, his forehead bunched into mine furrows. The wattles under his chin, partially covered by his yellow turtle-neck sweater, quivered slightly as he swallowed. When he finished, he looked up and said softly, "Forty per cent of the film is ruined."

"It is because of the shutter on one of our cameras," he continued. "We went in for a checkup good and it came out bad."

The film—seven miles worth—dealt with a project in Greek waters in which he and his crew aboard the "Calypso" worked for three weeks. He said the shooting could never be duplicated.

"But, bon, that's my problem. And I am not upset."

Discreetly, it was mentioned that he did not sound convincing.

"No, no. There is nothing that can upset a reasonable person," he said.

When he first dived into the "silent world without sunshine" in 1936—while doing cladestine operations for the Frenchy government—Cousteau says he found the "access to serenity."

"I have come to the same conclusion as I think, for example, wild-life park wardens," he said. "We have no time for internal problems. We try to concentrate on the truly important things—the struggle for survival, the protection of our children, and keeping safe and simple our little corner of the world. These are the lessons of nature."

"All emotional tension is artificial. It is entirely imposed upon us. People analyze themselves instead of looking outside. Inside—inside ourselves—is not so beautiful. In nature, these inner conflicts do not exist."

"But people have gone far from nature. They live in these concrete jungles and all around is the ugly. Like the motor car—steel box with doors and windows and buttons and handles. Even when a man goes into a forest, he wears boxes around his feet and head. And hands, if it is cold, He is packaged."

Cousteau continued, "I don't believe in any kind of religion. But I believe in the orientation of the universe. To what end, nobody knows."

"But if we believe in creation, then the rest of religion is nonsense. And to analyze it is meaningless, like psychiatry. We are totally negligible and have nothing to do with what's going on in the universe—its unstoppable progression."

"The earth will be consumed by the sun in four or five billion years, and the universe will carry on without man—exactly as before; no change."

Cousteau added, "The really spiritual person can always be comforted. He knows he is only a small fleck in the great stream. And he knows life is all an incredible miracle, and in a universe where there is practically no life outside this little planet."

"I am an admirer of life, and have no interest in power or riches or material goods for their own sake—that leads only to hysteria. I marvel instead at one leaf, at the sonar system of dolphins, at the pupil of the eye of a beautiful woman."

"I feel my purpose is to fight to keep the earth as beautiful as possible, to keep it as free from pollution and human desecration as I can, and to share with people the splendor of it."

Cousteau took a sip of water, slowly, and then said, "I look forward to going back home, back home to the sea. It will be so beautiful. But no, I do not describe it, I enjoy it."

The Captain stood up and excused himself. "I must send now a cable to my crew," he said, his voice rising along with the rest of him, "and tell them to throw that camera overboard!"

A Warning of Fire and Tragedy

KINGSTON

Emphasizing that precautionary safety procedures are "better late than never," Ulster County Health Commissioner Dr. Bartholomew J. Dutto has urged homeowners to be sure that their heating systems are cleaned, inspected and in proper working order.

Failure to adequately maintain home heating systems, said the commissioner, could result in carbon monoxide poisoning, fire and tragedy.

Dr. Dutto stressed that more than 10,000 people in the United States are affected by carbon monoxide poisoning each year. Nearly 1,500 lives are claimed annually and others experience headaches, dizzy spells, weakness, mental depression and nervousness from exposure to small amounts of the gas. In New York State alone last year, he said, 42 persons died from carbon monoxide poisoning.

The gas is produced when fuels burn incompletely. When sufficient fresh air is available and the fuel is burning properly, there is little danger of carbon monoxide poisoning.

"Operating any internal combustion engine, such as a car, or an improperly adjusted fuel-burning appliance, such as a spaceheater, in a closed area without adequate ventilation, can be fatal," said the commissioner.

To guard against such catastrophes, the Health Department has recommended a number of safeguards:

- All home fuel-burning equipment should be inspected and serviced annually.

- Fuel-burning heaters used to warm the house should be vented to the outside. If an unvented heater must be used, a window should be left open at least one inch. Unvented heaters should be turned off at night.

- Gas ranges or ovens should not be used for heating a room.

- A charcoal grill or hibachi should not be used in an enclosed area. Burning charcoal emits a large amount of carbon monoxide.

- Garage windows and/or doors should be left open while operating an automobile engine or other internal combustion engine.

- Car mufflers and tailpipes should be checked for leakage.

Car windows should be opened when the car is stopped for any period of time with the motor running.

Dr. Dutto also warned homeowners to be aware of the vague symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning. Mild cases, he noted, produce drowsiness, headaches, blurred vision, irritability and an inability to concentrate. Severe cases cause nausea and vomiting, shortness of breath, convulsions, unconsciousness and death.

Victims, he said, should be brought into the fresh air.

Claim ERDA Spending Illegal

By Jon Powers

HIGHLAND Mid-Hudson Nuclear Opponents (NO), in a strongly worded protest to Gov. Hugh Carey, has charged that expenditures made by the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (ERDA) since Aug. 9—including publication of the Lloyd Site Master Development Plan—are possibly illegal and should be halted.

The basis for NO's complaint is legislation signed by Gov. Carey on Aug. 9 restructuring the former Atomic and Space Development Authority (ASDA) into the new ERDA. That legislation, NO claims, expressly prohibits ERDA from disseminating information on atomic power.

In a Jan. 2 letter to the governor, Dr. Peter Brown, coordinator of NO's education committee, states that the legislation's "main purpose was to redirect New York's energy research and development policies away from nuclear energy and toward new energy technologies. The ERDA act defines 'new energy technologies,' in contrast to fossil fuel energy and nuclear

Lloyd site and to defend nuclear development in general.

ERDA officials have stated that they will accept inquiries from public utilities concerning the Lloyd site—with the ultimate goal being nuclear construction at the site—shortly after Wednesday's meeting.

That is a move that NO—an organization which represents the members of a number of Mid-Hudson area groups opposed to nuclear power in the Valley—apparently hopes to prevent through its letter to the governor, and through possible court action at a later date.

"I am outraged at the spectacle of former ASDA officials continuing to waste precious public funds for purposes appearing to have no legal or statutory justification," Brown said in his letter to the governor. "I would greatly appreciate it if you would promptly initiate a thorough investigation of this matter

In addition to his work with NO, Brown serves as chairman of the New York State Sierra Club's Energy Committee and as head of the statewide Safe Energy Coalition. He is a professor at the State University College at New Paltz.

The propriety of ERDA's continued involvement at the Lloyd Site since Aug. 9 has been questioned on numerous occasions. ERDA officials have contended that to suspend its site studies at this point would be to waste the several million dollars spent during the past two years on work at the Lloyd site. They claim that some of that money can be recovered by the sale of the master plan to an interested utility.

Wednesday's meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Highland High School

fission energy, as 'methods not in common commercial use'."

Brown also points out that the ERDA legislation specifically states that the new authority may only develop sites "for generating facilities based on new energy technologies" and to "disseminate information relating to the development and use of new energy technologies."

"The authority's former power," states Brown, "to disseminate information relating to atomic power, was repealed."

In November, ERDA published its Lloyd Site Master Development Plan, which outlined numerous so-called advantages for developing the site for atomic generation. This Wednesday, the authority will conduct an informational meeting to explain and defend its report

During that period, ERDA representatives also have appeared at meetings in Highland, New Paltz and Poughkeepsie to discuss the conclusions reached for the

Atomic Power Hearings Set

KINGSTON Warning against the probable dangers of nuclear power generation—and the unavoidable impacts of nuclear development in the Towns of Lloyd and Esopus—the Ulster County Environmental Management Council has urged residents of the Mid-Hudson Valley to attend the two informational meetings that will be held this week to discuss various facets of atomic development.

On Wednesday, the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (ERDA) will present its Lloyd Site Master Development Plan for public perusal and comment. Wednesday's meeting—which will be chaired by Clifford Beal, chairman of the Ulster County Planning Board, and will include presentations by a number of professional consultants who performed studies at the Lloyd site—will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Highland High School on Pancake Hollow Road in the Town of Lloyd.

On Sunday, Mid-Hudson Nuclear Opponents (NO) will present its own informational meeting on nuclear technology starting at 2 p.m. at the New Paltz High School on South Putt Corners Road. Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-25) will act as moderator of the afternoon session. A panel of scientists will evaluate the impact of four nuclear power plants proposed for the Lloyd-Esopus site by ERDA.

In a statement released this week, the Environmental Management Council pointed out that proposed nuclear development in the Town of Lloyd—as well as plans to construct an atomic power plant in Greene County just north of Saugerties—will have effects that will be felt by residents throughout Ulster County and the Mid-Hudson region.

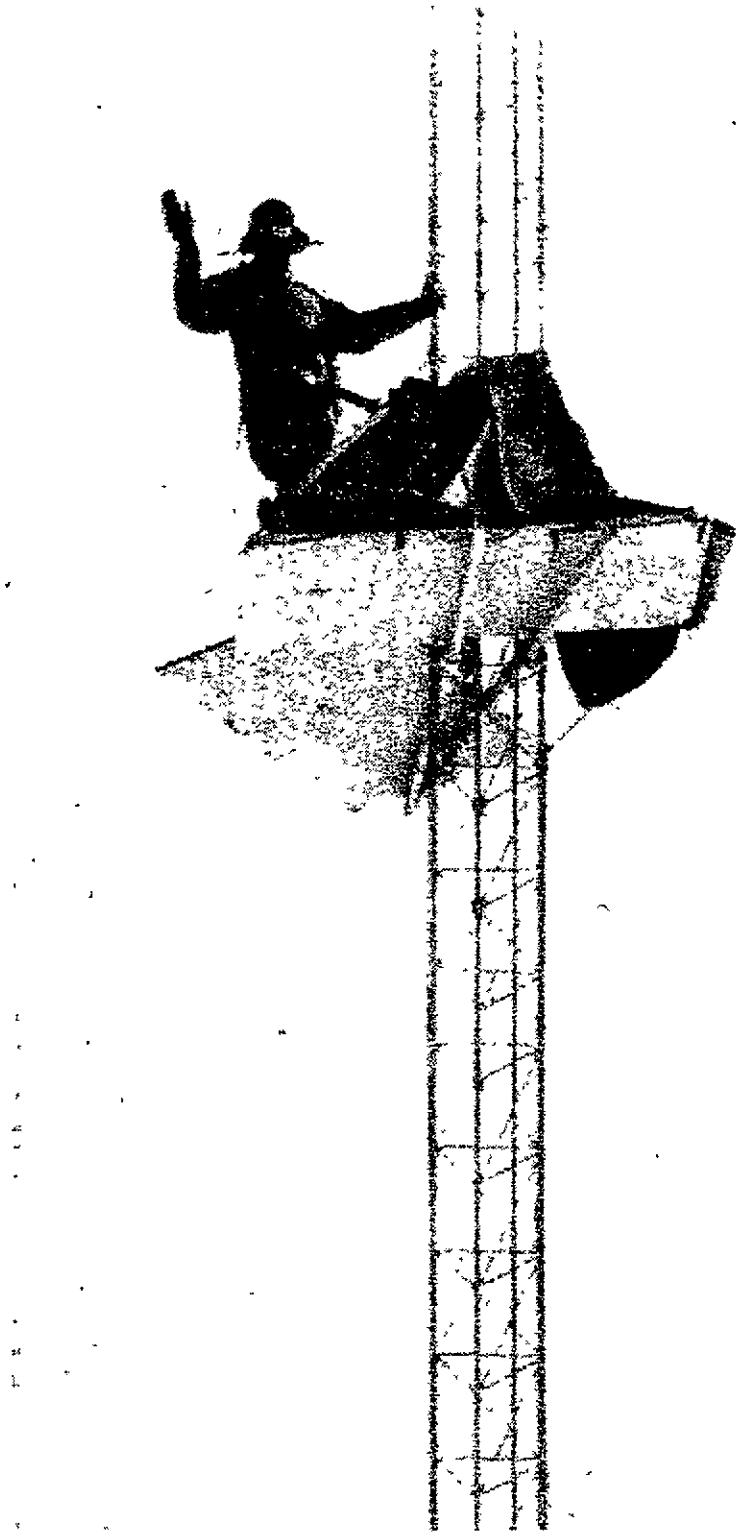

By attending both meetings on Wednesday and Sunday, the council stated that residents should obtain sufficient information to assess and evaluate both the advantages and disadvantages of nuclear development in Ulster County.

The council, which will co-sponsor Sunday's meeting in New Paltz, noted that serious questions have arisen concerning the safety and practicality of nuclear development.

"Initially, nuclear power was hailed as being the new, safe, clean and inexpensive source of energy for all our future needs, but time has shown that none of these claims are valid," said council chairman

Donald C. Bruhn. "We must stop and re-assess the nuclear industry in light of all the unsolved problems, including management of radioactive wastes, possible theft of nuclear materials for acts of terrorism and radioactive emissions in air and water

"Once again we recognize that conservation and development of alternate sources of energy can take the place of a technology that has grown too fast, too soon and is in need of caution. We do not wish to satisfy immediate power needs at the expense of generations to come."

Protest Pole Picnic

Pole-sitting with a purpose is Ron Riech of Weare, N.H., who climbed a 170 ft. weather tower before dawn Sunday at the site of the proposed nuclear power plant in Seabrook, N.H. to protest the building of the facility. Local police and officials from the Public Service Co. were guarding the area but had no plans to try to remove Riech, who has provisions for several days with him. (UPI)

'It Was Horrible'

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. — "It was horrible ... this is the worst one yet," a woman said of the 200-kiloton onemegaton range nuclear explosion detonated underneath the desert this weekend and felt as far as 300 miles away. The often-postponed blast, code named "Muenster," was set off at 11:15 a.m. PST Saturday and was up to 50 times greater than the a-bombs that ended World War II, with a yield equivalent to 200,000 to 1 million tons of TNT, a spokesman for the Energy and Research Development Agency said.

Hijackers Surrender

MANILA, the Philippines (UPI) — Two Filipino hijackers, armed with pistols and explosives, surrendered to authorities at Manila International Airport early Tuesday, ending a 10-hour drama during which they threatened to kill 200 passengers aboard a Japan Air Lines jetliner.

The two gunmen who seized the DCs at the Manila airport this afternoon had released all the passengers in exchange for a promise that they could fly on to Tokyo with the captive crew and other airline personnel. But they gave themselves up after the Japanese government refused to grant them permission to land in Tokyo because they were armed.

Scandinavian Tempest

BRUSSELS, Belgium — A new storm swept toward Scandinavia today on the heels of weekend tempests that killed dozens of persons in a wide swath of destruction from Britain to the Swiss Alps.

More than four dozen persons died and at least eight were missing as a result of the rain, snow and hurricane force winds that pounded the continent.

Damage to property, crops and livestock was expected to total millions of dollars.

Vow to Fight Partition

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Moderate political leaders have vowed to fight proposals to partition Lebanon into religious zones as a means of ending the country's bloody nine-month-old civil war.

A three-week-old cease-fire appeared to be crumbling, with rival Christian and Moslem militiamen battling in Beirut's shell-scarred eastern suburbs late Sunday.

Snipers wounded six persons and gunmen set up roadblocks across the city. Police reported at least 48 abductions over the weekend.

Airline Strike Over

MIAMI — The nation's third longest airline strike in history is over. After a 127-day shutdown, National Airlines was back in business.

National rushed requalifying of pilots and mounted a heavy advertising campaign today to mark the end of the strike. An airline spokesman said limited service would resume at 8:45 a.m. EST Tuesday with departure of a flight to New Orleans and San Francisco.

New PI Law Causing Confusion, Problems

By Matt Spireng

KINGSTON Confusion and problems surround the implementation of the new state law which went into effect Jan. 1 decriminalizing public intoxication.

Under the new law, persons intoxicated to the degree that they are considered a danger to themselves or to others are supposed to be taken to sobering-up stations set up by the state Department of Mental Hygiene. No detoxification centers have been established in Ulster County. In fact, only 21 such centers were ready in the entire state when the new law went into effect on New Year's Day.

In a statement issued to police agencies, Gov. Hugh Carey indicated that public intoxicants can be taken to state psychiatric centers if they are able to make judgments and want to go voluntarily. If they are so drunk that they can't make judgments, then they can be taken to a hospital. If they are aware of what they are doing, and won't voluntarily go with police, then they can't be bothered (unless they break a law). If they consent, drunks can also be taken to their homes.

Under the new law, police agencies could be turned into taxi or ambulance services for drunks, some area law enforcement officers have indicated.

Many police agencies don't have a firm policy yet on what they will do with drunks.

Since the new law went into effect, Kingston Police have already been bothered by a man who summoned them to a bar where had been drinking only to demand a ride home. He was advised to call a taxi, but an anonymous phone call minutes later to police stating that the man had threatened to kill himself resulted in the man getting his ride home.

Explaining that he can understand that the theory behind the change in the law is to try to rehabilitate or cure alcoholics, Kingston Police Chief Julius M. Glassman said, "I don't see how it will work out as far as police departments are concerned."

Glassman said he is going to stress to his men that they should not convey drunks anywhere unless they are under arrest.

Sheriff Thomas F. Mayone said he will direct deputies who come in contact with intoxicated to try to contact relatives to pick them up or to arrest them for disorderly conduct if they are abusive.

Both Mayone and Glassman were critical of the state's failure to set up detoxification centers.

"There are a lot of unclear areas about the roll of police (under the new law)," said Emil Groth, Ulster County's alcohol abuse coordinator. "The police have to make a lot of evaluations."

According to Groth, attempts are now underway to hold a meeting in Ulster County later this month with law enforcement agency heads and state representatives in an attempt to clear up some of the confusion.

"The law probably needs some amending," said Groth.

Community Development Seeks Funds for 'Hall'

By Hugh Reynolds

KINGSTON The city's Community Development Agency will hold public hearings on Wednesday and again on Jan. 12 on a plan to apply for up to $300,000 in federal funds for the restoration of the old city hall at 408 Broadway.

What the city is hoping to put together in fact is a package plan of federal and state funds to restore the building which has sat vacant since September of 1972 when the government moved to its new quarters at 1 Meadow Street. The $300,000 represents the federal share. The city already has a commitment of up to $500,000 in state funds.

The catch with the state is that its money will be given only on a matching basis which means that if the city gets approval of federal funding—and there are no guarantees—the maximum amount available for restoration would be $600,000, less than half the money city officials say is needed to restore and provide adequate parking for the 104-year old landmark.

The city is not expected to put any money into the project—a referendum to spend up to $1.5 million for the restoration of the building was defeated by a 3-2 margin in the November elections.

The funds the city is applying for are "discretionary" in that they are in addition to the city's $1.4 million yearly allotment under the Community Development program. That program will not be affected by action on the discretionary funding application.

Wednesday's public hearing will be chaired by Alderman Clifford G. Sinabough (D-10th Ward), chairman of both the Common Council's Community Development Committee and the Community Development Advisory Board. This public hearing differs from last year's public hearings on Community Development projects in that the city has already established its priorities—old city hall—and is asking public opinion on those priorities rather than asking the public for its priorities and then establishing a program from that.

Community Development Executive Director Ralph A. Morallo (who was not connected with the program when public hearings were held initially last January) allows that things have been somewhat reversed but says this year's forum still allows for adequate public input.

"We'll be getting a reaction from the public as to their feelings on the city hall," Marallo said. He said the fact that the city wants to spend money on city hall would not rule out other projects.

"Any adverse criticism would have to go back to the Community Development Council," Marallo said.

The city is working under something of a deadline with this latest Community Development project. Federal regulations call for submission of the "pre-application for discretionary funds" by Feb. 13. However, the package has to be submitted to a "state clearing house" for approval by Jan. 13, the day after the last public hearing.

Eugene G. Vogel of 360 South Wall Street, a Kingston area milk dealer for more than 40 years prior to his retirement, died Saturday at Kingston Hospital following a lengthy illness. Active in Kingston bowling, he had sponsored numerous bowling teams and in 1974 was inducted into the Kingston Bowling Association Hall of Fame. He was a past president of Cornell Hose Co. and a member of Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association. Mr. Vogel was a member of Kingston Lodge No. 10 F and AM; and Clinton Avenue United Methodist Church. Mr. Vogel was born in Queens, L.I., July 27, 1892, a son of the late George H. and Barbara Gaynor Vogel. He is survived by his wife, the former Josephine Rust; two daughters: Mrs. Lucille Everitt of Kingston and Mrs. Gerald (Barbara) Conrad of Apex, N.C.; a son, Donald E. Vogel of Kingston; a sister, Mrs. Florence Groucher of Fairlawn Radburn, N.J.; three grandchildren: Jean Auchmoody, James D. Vogel, Gerald W. Conrad; five great grandchildren, several nieces and nephews. The funeral will be held at the Jensen and Deegan Funeral Home, Inc., 15 Downs Street, Wednesday at 2 p.m. The Rev. Joseph G. Bailey, pastor of Clinton Avenue Methodist Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Wiltwyck Cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home this evening 7-9 and Tuesday 2-4 and 7-9.

Coutant

Jay G. Coutant, 92, died Jan. 3 at Phoenixville, Pa. Mr. Coutant was a former resident of Kingston. His wife, Gertrude W. Coutant, died Feb. 22, 1971. He was a friend of Joseph M. Horvath of Phoenixville. Graveside services will be held at Wiltwyck Cemetery Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. with the Rev. Harry D. Robinson, pastor of St. James United Methodist Church, officiating. Funeral arrangements are by A. Carr and Son Funeral Home, 1 Pearl Street.

Exhibit Of River Vessels

SAUGERTIES
In honor of the Bicentennial celebration, Saugerties, Chapter, N.S. Daughters of the American Revolution, will sponsor an exhibit of model Hudson River ships Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 10 and 11.

The exhibit, which is open to the public, will be held in the BeeVer House on Route 32 from 2-5 p.m.

The models, made many years ago by James G. Moore of West Camp, were loaned for the exhibit by Harry G. Moore. Made by an expert craftsman, they depict in exact detail boats from the early days on the river up through and including the modern day-liners.

Writer and lecturer Donald C. Ringwald of Latham, president of the Steamship Historical Society of America, will be the guest speaker on Jan. 11. Ringwald will describe the various ships and answer questions about them.

School Board Session

KINGSTON
Resolutions on the collector's return of tax warrants and approval of a company for participation in the tax sheltered annuity program are on the agenda when the Board of Education of Kingston High Schools Consolidated meets Thursday at the George Washington School, 67 Wall Street, beginning at 8 p.m.

The resolutions will be presented by Fred Hofbauer, chairman of the Business Management Committee. Other items on the agenda include reports from the Personnel Committee chaired by W. James Penrose, the Communications committee, chaired by Ronald Meyer, the Student Services Committee and Long Range Planning Committee headed by Doris Mulvin, the Building Committee under Evelyn Corsones, and a report from Superintendent of Schools Louis A. Salzmann.

Meetings Coincide

HIGHLAND
Wednesday's meeting of the Ulster County Planning Board will be held at 7 p.m. in Room E-39 of the Highland High School.

The meeting place coincides with the site of a public informational meeting that will begin at 7:30 p.m. involving the Lloyd Site aster Development Plan prepared by the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority. Planning Board Chairman Gifford Beal will serve as moderator of the informational session.

On the agenda for Wednesday's planning board meeting are several reviews of zoning referrals concerning properties in the towns of Woodstock and Rochester, a proposed zoning amendment in the Town of Rochester and a proposed zoning revision in the Village of New Paltz.

Highland High School is located on Pancake Hollow Road, which branches off Route 299, 2.3 miles east of the Thruway interchange in New Paltz.

MILLBROOK
The New York State Environmental Quality Review Act will be discussed at an open meeting sponsored by the Dutchess County Planning Department Tuesday at 9:30 p.m. at the Farm and Home Center in Millbrook.

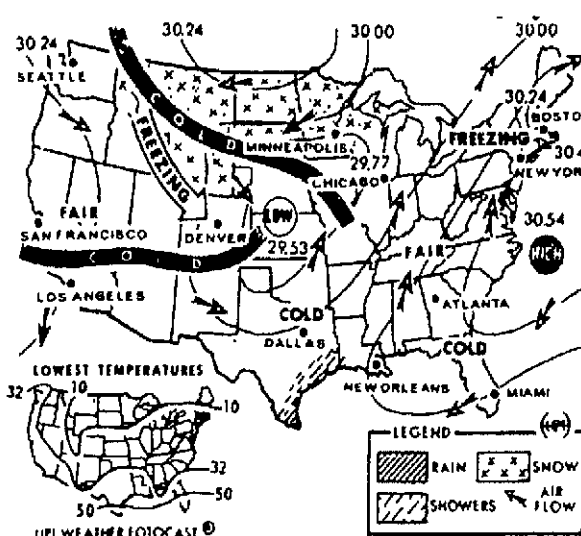

The new law requires the preparation of an environmental impact statement on any local government project which would significantly affect the environment. It has been approved by the New York State Legislature and will take effect in June.

Questions from the audience will be answered following a panel discussion on the new law.

Nuc Moratorium Is Passed

TOWN OF ROCHESTER
The Rochester Town Board acting on the suggestion of the town's environmental commission, unanimously approved a resolution proposing a moratorium on nuclear construction and development until all unknown impacts are resolved.

The measure was passed at the town board's final meeting of 1975. The board had previously passed a resolution expressing its opposition to nuclear development, but the environmental council urged a new resolution because it felt the original resolution was not strong enough.

The measure was introduced by councilman Vernon Gray. The board also received a special report from the commission dealing with the feasibility of nuclear generation.

In a related move, the board accepted the resignation of commission member Rita S. Avers, and appointed the following members to serve for terms effective Jan. 1: Edward Bober, Arthur J. Putnam and Bruce Schoonmaker (three year terms); Diane Lenard, Romeo Muller and Eric Karoll (two year terms); Robert Christian Robert Larsen and Ralph Svenson (one year terms). Named as ex-officio members of the commission were the highway superintendent, town historian and planning board chairman. Putnam was recommended as Rochester's representative on the Ulster County Environmental Management Council.

In other action at the Dec. 30 meeting, the town board:

- Passed a resolution which allows Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corp. to impose a fuel adjustment charge for special lighting districts, as permitted under the Public Service Law.

- Reported a year-end balance of about $3,000 in the general fund and $4,400 in the federal revenue sharing fund.

Arrest 3 for Coach House Fire

By Matt Spireng

KINGSTON

After nearly a month of investigation into a fire which extensively damaged a building owned by the Coach House Players, Inc., Kingston detectives on Sunday arrested three young Connelly residents on multiple charges, including arson and burglary.

Arrested in connection with the Dec. 12 blaze were Edwin Sauers, 19, George Lober, 19, and Robert Sauers Jr., 22, all of Box 43. They were each charged with two counts of third degree burglary, and one count each of third degree arson and petit larceny. Robert Sauers was additionally charged with one count of seventh degree criminal possession of a controlled substance when he was found to have an alleged marijuana cigarette at the time of his arrest. They were jailed pending court action.

Detectives said two fires were apparently set at the building at 12 Augusta Street after the trio allegedly broke in. The first blaze was said to have been set before they left, taking a sword with them. The three allegedly returned later to see how the fire was burning, but found it had gone out. They again entered the building and allegedly started a second fire, detectives said.

The fire was discovered at about 2 a.m. by a neighbor who called firemen to the scene. One side of the building used by the community theater group for rehearsals was extensively damaged. Roger Scholl, president of the Coach House Players, estimated the damage at about $50,000. The group has been rehearsing in various homes in preparation for their next production in February.

Police Beat

Out of Lineup

Following a lineup Saturday night, Saugerties Town Police charged Terrence Carney, 21, of Hilltop Apartments, Saugerties, with first degree assault and unlawful imprisonment in connection with a knife attack on a woman New Year's Eve.

At the time of the incident, police said a 43-year-old woman was leaving a store in Simmons Plaza when a young male asked her for a ride and then proceeded to slash her on the face and neck with a linoleum knife when she refused. It took 43 stitches to close the woman's wounds.

Police said today that the knife, which was recovered at the scene, had Carney's name scratched on the handle. He was positively identified by the victim and witnesses in the lineup, according to authorities.

Carney was jailed in lieu of $10,000 bail following arraignment before Saugerties Town Justice Timothy Murphy.

Purse Snatched

Kingston detectives are investigating a purse snatching incident which occurred Friday night on Main Street.

According to authorities, a 73-year old woman was walking in the vicinity of 11 Main Street when a black male ran up behind her and grabbed her purse, causing her to fall to the ground. The woman reportedly sustained minor injuries in the fall. The purse contained $200 and personal papers, police were told.

Burned Out

A plea has gone out for clothing and other items for a Binnewater couple who lost all their belongings in a fire Sunday.

Binnewater Fire Chief Vernon Ronk said the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lorenzo on Binnewater and Lake Hill Roads was fully involved in flame when they reached the scene shortly after 9 a.m. More than 60 firemen from the Binnewater, Rosendale, Bloomington and Tillson companies battled the flames for more than five hours. Cold temperatures and high winds hampered fire fighters' efforts. Ronk said the blaze apparently started due to poor insulation in the heating stove.

Clothing in small adult sizes should be left at the home of Mrs. Lois Craig, two houses from the Binnewater fire house.

Rifle Shot

Saugerties Town Police charged Donald Schaffer, 25, of 8 Garden Circle, Barclay Heights with second degree reckless endangerment and fourth degree criminal mischief on Sunday after he allegedly fired a rifle through the door of the home of Harriet P. Schaffer of Route 212, Saugerties. Police said the woman was apparently the suspect's step-mother. Schaffer was fined $250 after pleading guilty to the criminal mischief charge. The reckless endangerment charge was referred to family court.

Teddy May Run

Ford Wants Angola Cease-Fire

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — President Ford called for an immediate cease-fire in Angola today and warned the United States may take "limited measures" to block unacceptable Soviet actions in other parts of the world.

But he ruled out cutting off grain shipments to Russia in retaliation for Soviet intervention in Angola. He said it would be a "serious mistake" that would increase tensions between the two superpowers.

"We favor an immediate cease-fire, an end to all outside intervention and a government of national unity, permitting the solution of the Angolan problem by the Angolans themselves," Ford said in a speech prepared for delivery later today to the American Farm Bureau Federation convention in St. Louis.

"U.S.-Soviet rivalry in some areas around the world has, unfortunately, not ceased," Ford said. But instead of stopping grain sales to Russia, as he said some in Congress have suggested, the President said, "The answer is to take other appropriate limited measures necessary to block — and stop — Soviet actions that we find unacceptable."

He did not spell out other areas of Soviet troubling or specify what he meant by the threat of "limited measures."

He said a shutoff of grain would serve no useful purpose and would not produce an immediate gain in diplomatic leverage. He argued that the Soviets could get along without American wheat.

"The linkage of grain with diplomacy would mean disruption and hardship for you, the farmer, a serious increase in tensions between the world's two superpowers, and no effect in Angola," Ford said.

Ford's chief of staff, Richard Cheney, said Sunday the administration was an "encouraged" by Pravda's urging of an end to foreign intervention in the former Portuguese colony. But it was not clear whether the Soviet Communist party newspaper was referring to the 500 Soviet advisers and 7,500 Cuban combat troops in Angola.

Ford was to fly to St. Louis for a day that also included a luncheon with state and national farm bureau officials and a question-and-answer session with midwestern news and broadcast executives

Reagan 'Show' Opens

By UPI

Ronald Reagan's road show opened in New Hampshire today and President Ford's bid for renewal of his run in the White House took him to St. Louis to talk with farmers.

Reagan was to fly to Manchester, N.H., later today, for his first three days of primary campaigning. He planned stops in at least 17 isolated and mostly conservative-leaning hamlets.

Even before his arrival, Ford backers were criticizing the former California governor's most controversial proposal, a cut $90 billion worth of federal projects and return their functions to the states. Ford supporters raised the prospect of increased local taxes as a result of Reagan's proposal.

Ford was to address the American Farm Bureau Federation in St. Louis today. Although the trip was billed as "nonpolitical," it was considered unlikely Ford would hurt his campaign by defending his farm policy at the convention and discussing affairs of state at a meeting of regional news executives.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Buttz told UPI Ford has been hurt politically among farmers because of last year's temporary embargo on grain sales to Russia and Poland. But Buttz said the President will be in good shape politically by November and would get above 60 per cent of the farm vote if he runs against Hubert Humphrey.

White House chief of staff Richard Cheney said Sunday he did not think Ford's approval of covert aid to a pro-West faction in the Angola civil war would hurt the President and neither would portrayals of Ford as accident prone. "I think the American people have always had a bit of sense of humor about their political leadership," Cheney said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

As usual, Democrats were campaigning all over the country, with some attaching their hopes to the first balloting of the year two weeks from today in Iowa precinct caucuses and a week later in Mississippi caucuses.

Mayor Koenig's Message

City of Kingston taxpayers, who like the other Ulster County residents are going to shell out plenty of tax money on the present year, can take solace in one of Mayor Koenig's six proposals he outlined New Years Day in his message to the Common Council.

The mayor promised a city wide updating of property assessment records in the hope that new revenues will be found to lessen the tax burden on the property owner.

Koenig is proposing the undertaking of a comprehensive plan to correct deficiencies in the real property tax assessment inequities.

The Freeman applauds Koenig for this proposal. The costly certiorari proceedings, which resulted in thousands of dollars being returned by the city to some firms doing business here, directly resulted in the huge tax increase residents are being forced to pay in 1976.

The mayor also rates a pat on the back for insisting that charter revision will be pursued. Though he was against the recent charter revision proposal on the November ballot, the mayor claimed it was only because there wouldn't be enough time to implement it.

He has vowed to appoint a new commission and the Freeman recommends that the appointments be made as quickly as possible so that work on a new charter can get underway immediately. A new charter is a priority for this city.

For the first time since his 1972 message, Koenig didn't make a promise that the Broadway area opposite City Hall will be developed in the next few months.

A combination of the tight money pinch and the inability to get a food store in the area has just about put and end to the hopes that the desolate wasteland will be booming.

The mayor's remarks in the Bicentennial celebration were brief, to the point and sincere.

As he begins his fourth term in office, Koenig appears to be setting goals that are within reason and that will be beneficial to city residents many years after his administration has left office.

Inside Report

Ford's Dropouts

By Rowland Evans
And Robert Novak

DALLAS — Some cheerless members of President Ford's state campaign committee, stunned by his approval of the energy bill, gathered in Dallas Christmas night to agree on this damage assessment: Ronald Reagan may not only defeat but actually humiliate the President in the Texas primary May 1.

The trauma in Dallas was duplicated in Houston and elsewhere throughout the state within the Texas Republican establishment. Having followed Sen. John Tower into the Ford camp, they fear they may now be driven from party control by a surge of right-wing precinct workers backing Reagan.

Viewing Reagan with minimum admiration and his Texas supporters with maximum disdain, this state's establishment Republicans are not boarding the Reagan bandwagon. Rather, many will quietly drop out of the Ford campaign and pray that Reagan will, somehow, be stopped and the establishment rescued — perhaps by John B. Connally as favorite-son candidate.

The national impact of the Texas dropout could be profound. Tower-led Texas Republican regulars will not repeat for Gerald Ford in 1976 their 1968 mission for Richard M. Nixon when their steadfastness prevented a Southern breakaway for Reagan. This time, unless Reagan is stopped in earlier primaries, he will be favored to capture Texas, the South's largest delegate prize and a healthy push toward the nomination.

While Mr. Ford's signing the energy bill was no great surprise in Washington, his Texas supporters had believed in a veto to the end. Michael Halbouty, a Houston oil executive and Ford campaign fundraiser, came away from the Oval Office Dec. 18 believing the President had accepted his arguments that the bill would increase oil imports and decrease domestic production. When Mr. Ford announced approval of the bill Dec. 21, Halbouty immediately resigned from the Ford campaign committee.

The full court of resignations is not yet in. Nor is it known whether it will include State Rep. Fred Agnich, a Dallas oil millionaire and Republican national committeeman. But whether or not Agnich formally resigns, nobody expects him to provide further help here for the President. Even Sen. Tower is expected to become a less visible Ford man.

One prominent Dallas Republican, having expected a veto, now will stay away from the Ford campaign. While not formally resigning from the campaign committee, he will refuse to run as a Ford-planned national convention delegate. "I think Ford may be embarrassed by Reagan here," he told us bluntly, "and I don't want to be part of it."

The energy bill's adverse impact, furthermore, goes beyond the oil industry, which remains pervasively influential in Texas. This state's ordinary Republican voter tends to be an issue-oriented, doctrinaire conservative. "I guarantee you he cares about the energy bill," a glum Ford supporter told us. By approving continued oil price controls after preaching decontrol, the President also reinforced accusations of "waffling" — the word habitually used to describe him by Texas Republicans, pro-Ford and anti-Ford alike.

The energy decision only worsens a grave situation here for Mr. Ford. While Tower had corralled the party establishment, the effective precinct work in Dallas and Houston was being done by Reagan forces.

Furthermore, the Reagan campaign may attract hordes of rural conservative Democrats into the Republican primary. One anti-Reagan Republican believes the normal statewide Republican primary vote of 125,000 could rise to 225,000 or 250,000. His cold analysis: new voters will back Reagan.

Coincidentally, the Texas Republican party could be transformed if Reagan voters swarm into party precinct caucuses on primary day. Accordingly, establishment Republican leaders are seeking means to avert a Reagan avalanche May 1, not just to save Mr. Ford but to save themselves and to keep the party from being taken over by what one such Republican calls "John Birchers and other kooks."

Some Republicans urge Ford attacks charging that Reagan's policies would bring the twin anathemas of a state income tax and grain export controls. Others believe attacking Reagan will only enrage the conservative rank-and-file without reconstructing a non-waffling image for Mr. Ford.

But that reconstruction is so difficult after the energy decision that important Republicans wistfully hope the Justice Department will throw out the new primary law under the Voting Rights Act, reinstating an establishment-controlled caucus system which would deal out Reagan.

Only slightly more realistic is hope that Connally, easily the most popular public man in Texas, will enter the primary to expel all outsiders and save the regular leadership. That this may now be Mr. Ford's best chance for salvation in a state considered his Southern keystone scarce-committee, he will refuse to run as a Ford-planned national convention dele-

Warning From Arabs

The heavy cruiser "Quincy" lay at anchor in Great Bitter Lake. The President sat in his wheelchair behind a secondary gun mount. On the gray deck was a rug, a wicker table and some chairs. He was anticipating a visit from King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia.

Franklin Roosevelt expected the talk to be quid pro quo. The U.S. would give something, and get something. FDR proposed to give Ibn Saud money and technical help to turn the arid deserts into waving oceans of corn and cotton. What he would get would be Saudi Arabia's help in establishing a homeland for Jews along the Mediterranean.

Mike Reilly of the Secret Service and Harry Hopkins dashed around the gun mount. "Quick!" they said. "Come around and take a look." FDR had sent the destroyer "Murphy" to Jidda to fetch the king and his entourage.

Golden Ritual

FDR wheeled around under the bridge. The "Murphy" was heaving to against the big cruiser. Her forepeak was covered with rich rugs. A tent flapped on the bows. Ibn Saud sat on a gun mount in a gold chair. Moslem guards, armed with scimitars and rifles, manned the rails. A dead goat hung from a jackstaff.

Roosevelt retreated. The king and seven princes were piped aboard the "Quincy." U.S. Minister Eddy served as interpreter. The President believed that face-to-face diplomacy served him best.

Ibn Saud opened the conversation by saying he was old and sick. He admired FDR's aluminum wheelchair. The President ordered a second one brought on deck and presented to His Majesty.

FDR said that U.S. experts could make the deserts bloom. The king had a long, permanently sad face. "Should there not be a place for deserts?" he said. Raising and selling crops, said FDR, would bring Saudi Arabia into the 20th century as a productive nation.

"I am a warrior," the king said. "I know nothing else." Ah yes, the President said. Through many tribal wars you have brought peace and fashioned a great kingdom. Shouldn't older leaders, such as we, give the young a better standard of living?

Ibn Saud seemed impatient. His people were not ready for such progress. He was declining millions of dollars and technical assistance. FDR ordered lunch to be served on deck.

In the presence of the Moslem, the President could not smoke and could not have a cocktail. The two ate rice, lamb stew and grapefruit.

Afterward, FDR switched the topic. "I am interested in the future of Palestine," he said. The king frowned. He leaned forward. "You mean Jews?" he said. Yes, the President said. It seemed shameful to him that these unwelcome people had been driven from many lands and had no country of their own.

Ibn Saud's voice fell to an ominous whisper. When peace comes, he said, the Jews should be returned to the lands from which they had been driven. This, FDR said, would keep them separated from each other. He had information that 3 million Jews had been killed in Poland.

The king nodded. In that case, he said, there would be room in Poland for the resettlement of 3 million Palestinian Jews. Roosevelt appeared to be startled. The total number of Jews, he said, would be small compared to the number of Arabs.

Non-Stop 'No'

Ibn Saud looked him in the eye and said his first word in English: "No." FDR said the Jews were industrious and would make good neighbors. The king did not raise his voice, but he refused to stop talking.

That, he said, was the trouble. They wanted to settle on a strip of land along the Mediterranean and, with the help of millions of dollars and British pounds, they would build cities and farms. "Give the Arabs that much money," he said, "and they will do as well."

FDR, who was committed publicly and privately to a Jewish homeland, ran into unending argument. The Jews, the king said, had no more desire to live near Arabs than the Arabs wanted to live near Jews. In time, it must lead to war.

When the President returned to Washington, he was old and gray. He asked House speaker pro tempore John McCormack if he could address the Congress seated. McCormack said, "We'll have a good-sized chair ready."

On March 1st, 1945, FDR spoke to Congress. It was long, hopeful and vacuous. He won a pattern of mistaken applause when he said, "... from Ibn Saud of Arabia I learned more of the whole problem of the Moslems and the Jewish problem in five minutes than I could have learned by the exchange of a dozen letters."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

There were several other names on J. Edgar Hoover's hate list; the old bulldog subjected most of them to FBI harassment. Indeed, Hoover merely had to develop a mild dislike for a person, and the FBI would begin breathing down his neck.

More than one distinguished lawman, for example, was systematically smeared by the FBI because his name happened to be mentioned as Hoover's possible successor.

Sometimes the late FBI chief kept running memos on his victims — an FBI version of the old high school "slam books." Agents would record everything they heard about the unsuspecting subject, false or not, in a running log for Hoover's perusal.

The quickest way for a free people to lose their liberty is to grant too much power to their policemen. Hoover overstepped his authority; he grossly misused the FBI. Since no government official can assume powers that the people don't bestow, the old G-man was acting illegally.

The American way calls for full revelation and sweeping reforms. It is essential, therefore, to dig out Hoover's secrets. If they are buried with him, a future FBI director will find it easier to imitate him.

Here's how Hoover used the FBI to harass his enemies and smear his rivals:

—The New York Post's liberal editor, James Wechsler, was high on Hoover's hate list. When Wechsler sent a reporting team to Washington in 1959 to prepare a series about the FBI, the apprehensive Hoover assigned FBI squads to follow the reporters. Agents broke into the room of one reporter at the old Raleigh Hotel, hoping to find blackmail evidence. When none turned up, the frustrated agents talked of planting narcotics in the room and notifying the Washington police drug squad. The plan was discarded, however, not because it was illegal but because it was risky.

—Hoover came to hate the late Attorney General Robert Kennedy with a passion. After Kennedy visited two FBI field offices, Hoover solicited affidavits from the agents about Kennedy's private remarks on wiretaps. The purpose was to portray Kennedy as a liar. One agent, who reportedly was pressured to distort his affidavit, refused to give one.

—The FBI chief had a running feud with Walter Bedell Smith, the late, distinguished Undersecretary of State. Hoover directed his agents to gather gossip about Smith and to spread rumors that Smith was having an affair with a top woman official. The patrician Smith got so enraged that he accused Hoover of wasting the taxpayers' money on rumor mongering and threatened: "I'll fight you all over Washington if I have to." Hoover backed down.

—The FBI director also engaged in bureaucratic warfare against another Attorney General, Robert Jackson, who later was appointed to the Supreme Court. With documents in hand, Hoover tried to persuade President Franklin D. Roosevelt that Jackson was inefficient.

—Hoover conducted an ugly, "running memo" campaign against former Immigration Commissioner Joseph Swing who had the audacity to complain that Hoover wasn't cooperative. The FBI chief went personally to President Dwight Eisenhower with gossip about Swing. One unproved story was that the Immigration Commissioner was an alcoholic.

—Nothing infuriated the old FBI curmudgeon more than talk of being replaced. At one time, Texas' Public Safety Director Homer Garrison was mentioned as a possible successor. Although Garrison had done nothing against Hoover, the G-man ordered agents to check into Garrison's past. When the investigation produced nothing derogatory, Hoover spread the word to his agents to give Garrison as little cooperation as possible.

—Hoover also feuded with Detroit's respected police commissioner George Edwards who had suggested police chiefs should be more independent in their thinking about Hoover. When Edwards was named to the federal bench, the FBI chief sought secretly but unsuccessfully to block his nominations.

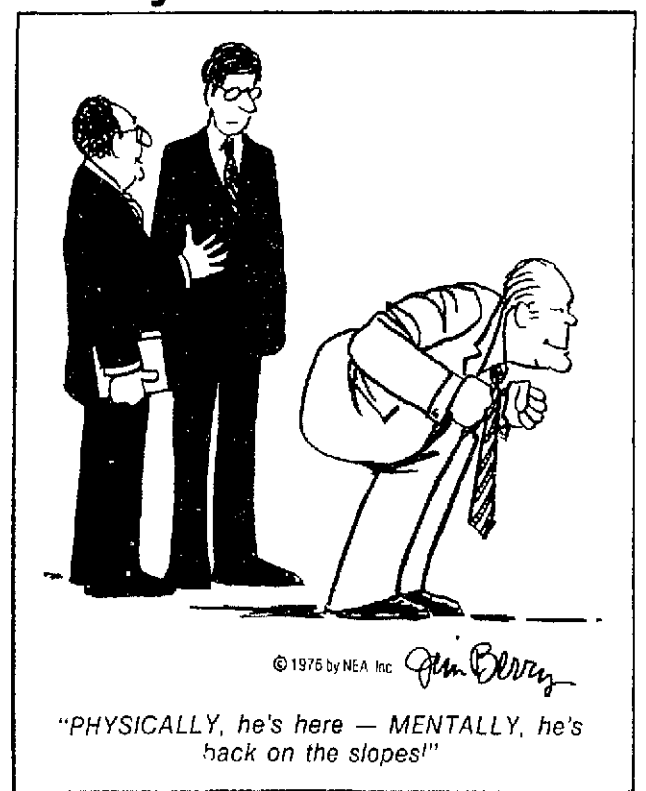

—Two other prominent police chiefs, Chicago's Wilson and Los Angeles' William Parker, also got on the wrong side of Hoover. The FBI director instructed his aides to check every index in the FBI for negative information about the two lawmen. When this turned out to be unproductive, Hoover spread the word, through his chief factotum, Clyde Tolson, that Parker was an "egomaniac" and Wilson was an "alcoholic." Neither charge was true.

J. Edgar Hoover used his enormous power as director of the FBI to uphold his viewpoints and to smear anyone he disliked. His personal power ended with his death.

But his name lives on. The FBI has now moved into a huge, esthetically displeasing structure across the street from the Justice Department. It has taken Hoover's name.

In a way, it is an appropriate monument to his memory. Its bulk overwhelms the parent agency much as he overwhelmed the Attorney General who was his superior. Its interior is also designed to accommodate the world's largest collection of papers, documents, photographs and fingerprints. These are the files of the FBI.

Chic Goes Second-Hand

WASHINGTON (KFS)—Vuitton luggage, Gucci shoes, Hermes scarves and other ridiculously priced advertisements for one's self and the manufacturer?

There is a very good quote by Diana Vreeland, the famous editor of Vogue and Harper's Bazaar, about that kind of thing in "Cheap Chic" (by Catherine Milinaire and Carol Troy, Harmony Books, N.Y., $5.95 paper): "When I was in Beverly Hills I went down Wilshire Boulevard on a Saturday afternoon and saw crowds of cars and people. Usually there are never very many people — after all, it's not a big city. And I said to my son, who was driving, 'Oh, God, I hope it isn't an accident!' And he said, 'Good God no, that's just Saturday afternoon at Gucci.' All these men bring in girls who want to shop. That's all they want. At the end of the week it's, 'Baby, I'll take you to Gucci if you're good.'"

Common people like R. Sargent Shriver wear Gucci shoes and make fools of themselves in public in other ways. Their female counterparts, in Washington's Georgetown at least, have Vietnamese faience elephants for end tables and are still terrorized by their hairdressers and their couturiers.

Classic in Blue

out so they can make money without having to discipline rich, worthless women. Yves St. Laurent is beyond that: "More and more I believe in well-made, basic clothes with no 'fashion' that last many years without transformation — exactly like a blue jean. 'Classic' seems to be an old-fashioned word, but I think the contrary. A blue jean is a classic and I don't think it's old."

If you're going to dress yourself in blue jeans, you need a fully formed self to dress. A great many people do nowadays. The reign of universal single-look fashion was broken five or six years ago and it's stayed broken. The corporate creeps may run out to buy themselves leisure suits, but far, far more dress to suit themselves. Compare now to a decade ago, and notice how few people want to know what the other people are going to be wearing at the party. If it's a dress-alike party, it's a people-alike party, and who wants to go?

If there are no more rules of dress, then how do we learn to dress for ourselves? Milinaire and Troy take up that problem in "Cheap Chic," and for all but the hollow, the shallow and the self-less, their book should help. It's one thing to reject fashion and another to know what you want to put on and how to find it, if grow old with, but other items of clothing are best to buy second-hand. Once upon a time, it was hippies and poor people who bought old clothes, but now the hippie elements in Hollywood and savvy people generally do. Second-hand clothes offer a greater variety. You're not stuck with the fads of the moment and the value is incomparably greater, especially for women. Unless a woman wants to pay hundreds and hundreds of dollars, she's not going to be able to get good materials and workmanship in first-hand rags.

Some people probably shy away from second-hand clothes because they don't know where or how to shop for old clothes, or what to do with them after they have them. Milinaire and Troy tell you all about that and many other matters more exotic but within the range of low-budget people. If you are enough of your own person to have a feel for your own distinctive fashion, "Cheap Chic" can tell you how you can get from concept to execution.

For students of society, the book documents how far we've moved from reigning norms, servants and services, snobism and drastic gender definition to uni-class, unisex, washing machines, limited closet space and I-don't-take-it-if-I-can't-get-under-the-airplane-seat.

Rule number one, naturally, is learn to stay healthy and keep your body in shape or don't ask the clothes to hide what you've done to yourself. A lot of the suggestions in "Cheap Chic" are just as simple and sensible, as the authors show both women and men how they can look great and have fun on three or four hundred dollars a year. Or more, if you've got it and want to spend it that way.

Begin with Boots

Thus modern fashion starts with the feet. On them you do not stint. Shoes or, better yet, boots should be the most expensive part of your wardrobe, because if you can't stand and walk comfortably it doesn't matter what else you have on — you're not going any place. The thought of paying $100 or more for a pair of boots is bothersome, but these are good boots so they will wear a long time, which brings us to the next precept: What's good-feeling and good-looking when it's new is just as good when it's old. Don't look at the price, look at "the cost-per-wear." If you're going to wear boots 200 times a year for five years, $150 bucks isn't expensive.

Good things like boots you buy new and

7 in 10 Americans Predict a Year of Economic Trouble

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J.

Although many of the government's top economists predict an upturn in the economy during 1976, the public does not share this optimism.

Seven in 10 Americans, in fact, predict 1976 will be a year of economic trouble, while at the same time, 57 per cent believe unemployment will rise.

By way of background it is interesting to note that the predictions of the public have often been more on target than those of economic experts. Two years ago, at the start of 1974 for example, most economists said the economy would improve, but the public accurately predicted a worsening economy.

Gloom Here Shared by People Abroad

The gloomy outlook of Americans at the start of the new year is shared by publics in many of the other nations in the survey. Most pessimistic are the British (73 per cent see trouble ahead), the Swiss (72 per cent) and the Americans (70 per cent). Considerable pessimism is also found in Italy, West Germany, Canada, Spain and Brazil.

Job Outlook — Here and Abroad

While nearly six in 10 Americans (57 per cent) predict rising unemployment, the U.S. public is less pessimistic than one year ago, at the start of 1975, when nearly nine in 10 (87 per cent) predicted a year of increasing unemployment.

Americans are more pessimistic regarding the job outlook than are people in six of the other 11 nations surveyed, but less pessimistic than people in five nations. Most inclined to think unemployment will increase are the Swiss (77 per cent) and the British (74 per cent). Marked pessimism is also recorded in Italy, West Germany, Japan, India and Canada.

Here is the question asked to determine attitudes toward the overall economy:

"Which of these do you think is likely to be true of 1976: a year of economic prosperity or a year of economic difficulty?"

Following are the latest results and trend for the U.S. They show that while a solid majority of Americans are pessimistic about the economy, they are less bleak in outlook than two years ago at the start of 1974. At that time a record 85 per cent said the nation was headed for a year of economic trouble.

This question was then asked to determine attitudes toward the employment outlook for 1976:

Fight For Rights

What a trip! By plane, by car, by boat, by train, I crossed 3,000 miles of Canada. I went there to learn how the government of Canada relates to its 1.7 million senior citizens.

In Ottawa, the capital, I dealt with federal officials. As you'd expect, we talked about money, housing, health, nursing homes and the social life of the elderly.

Then I went to the provinces and municipalities to find out whether the federal officials had handed me a "line." After that, I took my trusty tape recording machine and talked to the old people as a check on the government officials.

One word kept cropping up in nearly every official interview and in most personal conversations. The word was "pioneers." The implication is significant. We in the United States often forget that Canada is a young country. Officially, in fact, Canada is only 108 years old. Like our own pioneers, adventurous men and women broke new ground to build a great country.

Those pioneers and their sons and daughters now make up a very large and important sector of Canada's over-60 population. They are proud of what they have done. They have grown older in years, but not in spirit. It would be impossible for the Canadian government to treat them just as "old people." The habit of fighting for and doing for themselves is basic to their lives.

R. A. Hodson, the federal director of income security and guaranteed supplementary income, said, "Retirement for Canadians constitutes a change in role but not in purpose. When young, our pioneers set the patterns for life in our country.

They now continue to dictate our country's standards for the aging. Naturally, that includes the aged who came as immigrants as well as the pioneers."

"And how does this work out in practice?" I asked. "It is impossible for such people to change. They will not relinquish their honored position as the builders of the country," he replied. "Older Canadians expect recognition for past performance as their due. Part of that expectation is the right to determine how the old may continue to help build and run the nation. In our country, those over 60 tell us what to do about aging. We wouldn't dare to tell them," Hodson said. "It would be presumptuous."

He found 'the grass is greener' on the other side of the border.

To put it bluntly, I didn't really believe him. It sounded too much like "pie in the sky." But I reserved judgment. Hodson was saying that in Canada, matters related to seniors were managed as often as possible by seniors themselves under their own independent leadership, and the government assisted with professional help and funding.

If that was true, older Canadians had to come out ahead of older Americans on most of the basic life situations encountered by seniors.

In Canada, pioneers are respected. It is even correct to say that they are revered. Because of them, senior citizens generally are admired. That admiration expresses itself in the practical aspects of senior life in Canada. It also is evident in many subtle ways, which have to do with improving the self-esteem of seniors like themselves.

My aim in reporting my trip across Canada is to show that the Canadian government actually listens to its aging citizens and acts upon their demands as quickly as possible. That seems to be the case on a federal level as well as in the provinces, the municipalities and the rural areas. When you find the conservative politicians complaining that senior citizens aren't getting enough social security, there's a story to tell.

Canada Listens

There's only one way to read columns about good things being done for seniors in places other than where you live: You need to say to yourself, "Why can't we have that improved situation here? Why not me?"

While traveling in Canada I learned that in Canada and in her provinces, the governments really listen to what seniors say about their needs and expectations. In an earlier column I pointed out also that senior initiatives spark many innovative programs. Wherever possible, seniors manage projects themselves under their own leadership. The results of that approach are reflected in many basic relationships between the Canadian elderly and their government.

Let's try a few examples:

There's inflation in Canada. There's inflation in the United States. Both countries record cost-of-living increases every three months. If the index goes up in any quarter, Canadian seniors get the increase right away, in their social security payments. The Canadian seniors wanted it that way.

In our case, from the first quarter, beginning June 1, through the last quarter, ending the following June 1, we get no increase in Social Security. The total of percentage increases between one June 1 and the next reaches us on July 3 a year later. Even that wasn't safe this year; President Ford asked Congress to limit cost-of-living Social Security increases to 5 per cent. (Luckily, Congress turned him down.)

Take another case: This relates to homeowners. The federal government of Canada appropriated $15 million to improve and restore the homes of the elderly that had fallen into disrepair. Up to $1,000 was allowed to each over-65 homeowner to effect such repairs upon proof of need. Mind you, it was not a loan.

Has anyone even broached such an idea in the U.S.?

Where do you get the money to repair your roof? And, then there's "Mincome." (That's what it is called in British Columbia.) "Mincome," as the name indicates, is minimum income. Every senior single is entitled to about $275 a month. Couples get about $425 a month. In a program similar to our SSI (Supplemental Security Income), seniors receiving less social security are brought up to that level.

Now let's take a look at a home for the aged with full health-care and nursing facilities. Baycrest in Toronto is an example of how old people can live in dignity when they themselves choose (and help run) an institution.

Baycrest is a Jewish non-profit home for the elderly. About 380 people live there. There is a two-week trial period for each prospective new resident. Applicants have a chance to find out whether they like the life. Baycrest management and present residents can determine how well the applicant will adjust. Those who find that they can't adjust return home. Those who choose to stay pay according to their ability.

Here's the tip-off on Baycrest: Nonresident elderly persons from the surrounding neighborhood spend their days at the home. They enjoy the social life. They eat their lunches there in the Baycrest cafeteria. (Lunch 75 cents. Gefilte fish on Friday, if you please. Good, too. I had some.)

I submit that when old people, nonresidents, go to an old-age home because it's a great place in which to have a pleasant time, that's news. I defy you to name such an institution in the United States.

All of that brings us logically enough to housing for the Canadian elderly. Come with me, now, to Edmonton, Alberta. There, my wife Nikka and I had the ground tour of two high-rise apartment houses: Meadowcroft (500 tenants) and Kiwanis Place (650 residents). In both buildings, the entire lobby area is for social gatherings; the three "R's," as it were: reading, recreation and repose in good company. No cold, bare-walled, folding-chair senior center in Meadowcroft and Kiwanis Place.

The decor, the furnishings of the lobbies in Meadowcroft and Kiwanis Place were sumptuous. Nikka and I agreed completely that those lobbies are more beautiful, more comfortable than those of the finest (most expensive) hotels in Canada. The individual apartments are efficient and attractive. The halls have wall-to-wall carpet. The buildings are maintained better than most apartment houses in the States.

As the Rev. Harry Meadows (Meadowcroft was named for him) said: "In Alberta and especially here in Edmonton, nothing is too good for our seniors. That's why they run this building themselves." The projects are sponsored by the Alberta Provincial Department of Housing. Tenants pay $81 a month for a single room, $110 for a one-bedroom apartment. Officials said similar accommodations privately would cost $250-$300 a month.

Dear Abby

Seniors Should Write a Letter a Day

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Here is one woman who was delighted to read the letter signed, PREFERENCES SKIRTS!

I hate women in trousers! I never wear pants unless, of course, I plan to climb a tree.

Women who claim that pants are more comfortable must have been brainwashed by those money-hungry fashion designers.

And what kind of an excuse is, "They hide the runs in my stockings?"

And as for the excuse, "They keep my legs warm," a long dress will do the same thing.

"Preferences Skirts" did deflate me somewhat, however. Men are always exceptionally nice to me. They always open doors for me and treat me with respect, and here I thought it was just me. Now I realize that perhaps it was because I was wearing a dress. Oh well, I don't care, as long as they keep doing it.

And by the way, Abby, you don't look very good in pants suits. I know, because I've seen you.

FEMININE

DEAR FEM: Sorry about that. I never wear pants suits for public appearances. However, I do wear them for climbing trees and traveling.

DEAR ABBY: I think my brother's wife has developed more than a casual interest in my husband. He and my brother have been best buddies for years, and we have been a friendly foursome ever since their marriage two years ago.

Agnes (not her real name) used to be a quiet, demure

little thing, but lately she's become a flirty, aggressive little sexpot. She always has an off-color joke to tell, and lately she's been suggesting that we switch partners when we drive somewhere so she can sit next to my husband. That leaves me with my brother. (Big thrill?)

I notice Agnes pops in only when my husband is home, which indicates that she comes here to see him — not me.

Now she wants us to take our vacations together. I'm against it. My husband has given her no encouragement, whatsoever, and my brother either doesn't catch on or doesn't care.

How can I cool the foursome friendship without being obvious?

BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: What's wrong with being obvious? Tell your husband that you think Agnes has designs on him, and you'd like to head off trouble. Find another couple to get chummy with and slowly see less of Agnes and brother. And if Agnes suggests switching or vacationing together, graciously but firmly veto it.

DEAR ABBY: Fifteen years ago you wrote in your column that a retired person should write at least one personal letter a day. You said it would pay big dividends.

I took your advice, and it worked? Now, I correspond with at least a dozen old friends. The mail is the highlight of my day. Great medicine for an old man living alone!

I keep in touch with former schoolmates and some relatives who live far away. And at 81, I still have quite a few left. I even correspond with a 90-year-old lady who was my mother's housekeeper and has known me since I was a child.

Pass this on to your readers, Abby. It has done me a world of good, and it's worth mentioning from time to time.

GEORGE IN GA.

DEAR GEORGE: By George, I will! Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Humidify For Health; Economy

Unless your home is equipped with a humidifier, it will probably be twice as dry as the Sahara Desert during the winter.

This dire warning comes from the National Better Heating-Cooling Council which notes that during the winter the relative humidity in many homes is 13 percent or less while the average relative humidity of the Sahara Desert is 23 percent.

In the winter, the air in the average house changes completely every two hours or less. As this air — which is cold and dry — passes through the house, it is heated and becomes drier. Unless moisture is added to the air, the relative humidity drops.

There are important reasons why humidification is needed within the home. Medical authorities are agreed that dry air adds to the discomfort of upper respiratory diseases. Painted surfaces within the home tend to peel or crack; the glue in furniture dries out; and people suffer shocks from static electricity.

To overcome these problems it is best to add a central power humidifier to the home. These can be installed, notes the Council, regardless of the type of heating system in the home. Since a central power humidifier is connected to the water system, they do not require refilling. The humidifier air is discharged through a conveniently located grille. The best location for the grille is usually the bottom of a stairwell, but location is not too important. According to a scientific principle, moisture disperses itself evenly throughout the house.

Make sure your humidifier has its own humidistat which activates it when the house needs moisture. Humidifiers which are part of the heating system operate only when the thermostat calls for heat.

If you cannot afford a central humidifier, there are many portable or room-type models which may do a limited job. The Council endorses the theory that even a little moisture is better than none at all.

Adding A Room Costs Lot Less Than Moving 'Up'

For more space at home, add a room. It's cheaper than moving to a larger house, and the improvement will add to the value of your property.

Builders and building materials dealers report a lively business in room additions during this "tight money" period. They report also that a growing number of these additions are featuring hardboard siding. This type of siding, available in many patterns, textures and finishes, has proved popular with builders and home owners because its weatherability and durability have been established.

Masonite brand Bayside, a multi-level lap siding with a woody surface texture, is an exterior product that appeals to many. The 12" wide strips are 16 feet long, therefore can be applied quickly. Bayside can also be used for mansard roof applications.

For more information on hardboard sidings, send a postcard to the Masonite Home Service Bureau, Box B, Chicago, Ill. 60690.

Distinctive Patterns

Marlite designer planks offer a bright array of colors and distinctive patterns to give any interior a modern decorator's touch. Select accent colors for trim and feature panels, pastel colors for dominant wall areas, and striking patterns for interesting backgrounds.

Unused basement space becomes a spirited recreation area with an Irish Pub theme — thanks to some clever, but inexpensive decorating ideas from the interior designers at

Armstrong. Do-it-yourself floors, carpets, and ceilings thoughtfully combined with color and imagination produce a truly enchanting retreat for family and friends.

Hibernian Hideaway Is Stylishly Irish

You don't need the luck of the Irish to turn an ordinary basement into an extraordinary rec room! What you do need is a little imagination plus some do-it-yourself ability.

Take a clue from the interior designers at Armstrong who planned this unusual family retreat around a St. Patrick's Day theme.

To capture the cozy spirit of an Irish pub, they used a variety of Armstrong products — plus numerous decorating

"tricks" — to carry out their creative ideas.

The handsome vinyl-asbestos tile floor started this magical transformation. (Somehow when a new floor is added to a room, decoration almost suggests itself, and the whole room becomes alive of its own accord.)

The rich flooring, which harmonizes so well with the wall paneling, is easy-to-install Place 'n Press Excelon tile in the Oak Knoll design. Kelly green indoor-outdoor carpet by decks (or "dis-carded") cards; here we see them mounted and framed to make decorative wall hangings.

Armstrong separates the dining area. (Note how the carpet is also used as a vibrant wallcovering around the fireplace.)

For economy and versatility, the game/dining table is a whiskey barrel topped with stained plywood and edged with filigreed stock brass trim. Chairs are second-hand, spray-painted. More color is served with friendly warmth in the heather pink chair cushions and headrests.

Two sculptured braces enhance the charm of Armstrong's Colonial Sampler Chandelier ceiling and visually separate the dining area from the sitting room. Along with molded urethane beams, there is a combination of interesting textures overhead. Wood dowels attached to the bar ceiling hold stemmed glasses, and recessed lighting creates a shimmering effect on the crystal.

Another do-it-yourself feature includes the re-embroidered fabric borders which are stretched over a plywood frame outlining the tiny casement windows, making them look deceptively large. With lacy curtains hanging below, the Irish fantasy is complete. To coordinate the room scheme, the same fabric border which was used at the windows is also sewn onto the sofa slipcovers. Bar stools, cleverly, are terra cotta drain pipes mushroom-topped with cushions over pegged wooden tops.

The Irish personality of the room comes from appropriate accessories. Clay pipes on a wall . . . shamrock-patterned china . . . equestrian art all correlate with the room's mood.

Even the narrow wall space separating the two areas is accessorized attractively with oversized kitchen utensils. It's all in keeping with the increasingly popular "country" ethnic look.

Green-and-white-and-Irish-all-over — this room looks like a leprechaun unearthed a treasure trove of ideas!

Lack of space in a home doesn't have to put a damper on family living.

Follow the lead from the designers at Armstrong.

Fix Stuck Disposer This Way

Chicago (NFS) — Garbage disposers are built to take a lot of punishment. However, if a hard object such as a paper clip or bobby pin accidentally falls into the unit, a jam will probably occur.

According to Ernest J. Praulx, vice president-consumer product service for the In-Sink-Erator Division, Emerson Electric Co., Racine, Wis., the principle of operation of a disposer is a simple one.

"In very basic terms, a round metal turntable inside the mouth of the disposer rotates at more than 1,700 revolutions per minute," Praulx said.

THIS ACTION causes the food waste resting on the table to be flung against the inner wall of the disposer. Here a circular shredding ring actually shreds the food waste until the particles are small enough to be flushed to the drain line connection below.

"A hard metal object falling between the rotating table and the outer shredding ring will halt the table and cause a jammed condition."

Here's what Praulx recommends you do about it:

1. FIRST, MAKE certain that the switch for your disposer is in the off position.

2. Reach in the disposer and remove the object, if possible. There are no knives or blades inside, just the rotating table and the outer shredding ring.

3. If your disposer comes with a self-service wrenchette, fit it into a socket under the disposer and work the rotating table back and forth until the jam is free.

4. FOR OTHER makes, use a broom handle and insert it through the drain opening so that the end of the handle is touching one of the projections on the rotating table. Then pry with a steady but strong pressure, first in one direction and then in the other until the jam is free.

5. After the jam is free, press the small red reset button, normally located on the bottom of the appliance.

Praulx stated that if the jam persists after these measures are tried, it's time to call a local disposer service agency.

LIFE TODAY

Planning A New Bathroom?

What is the most used room in the home—and often, the most neglected? The bathroom.

No other room contributes so much per square foot to the quality of life for a family. More and more home-owners, becoming aware of this fact, are starting to remodel existing baths, and in many cases, adding second or third ones. How do you plan baths that grow with your family's needs? How can you find space for that needed powder room?

And finally, what are the most contemporary ideas in modern plumbing—fixtures, materials, designs and colors?

These questions and many more are answered in a combined design kit and planning guide book from American-Standard.

A feature of the kit is a 32-page brochure, "So you're Planning a Bathroom." . . . that colorfully illustrated many sample bathrooms and offers solutions to all the problems encountered in bathroom planning and remodeling.

Franco's Finest Hour

Steelers Franco Harris (32) is clutched by teammates and ball handler after he scores in fourth quarter to give Pittsburgh a ten point lead over Oakland. Franco's TD helped Steelers take AFC title with 16-10 victory Sunday. (UPI)

Weather, Steelers Chill Raiders

By RICK GOSSELIN
UPI Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A 15-degree temperature and a 17-mile an hour wind combined to freeze a few fingers and toes Sunday in the American Football Conference Championship game between the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Oakland Raiders.

The Steelers, however, get a chance to thaw out in Miami next week. The Raiders, for the fourth straight year, must remain out in the cold until next December when the National Football League again conducts its annual playoff lottery for the right to appear in the Super Bowl.

Pittsburgh unleashed a devastating defensive chill to match what nature had in store for the two AFC title game participants when its vaunted "Steel Curtain" defensive unit forced five turnovers and kept Oakland scoreless for almost 48 minutes in giving the Steelers a 16-10 victory and a second consecutive Super Bowl appearance.

Pittsburgh will meet NFC champion Dallas Jan. 18 in Super Bowl X at Miami's Orange Bowl. The Cowboys destroyed host Los Angeles 37-7 Sunday in the NFC title game.

Linebacker Jack Lambert recovered a playoff record three fumbles and safety Mike Wagner intercepted two passes to help stymie the potent Oakland attack while quarterback Terry Bradshaw was warming up the Pittsburgh offense.

"Turnovers decided it," said Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler, who had a dismal nine for 25 passing performance for 102 yards through three quarters before catching fire in the fourth period to rally his team. "Big games are decided by big plays and we didn't make enough of them."

The Pittsburgh defense made all the big plays, highlighted by the performance of Lambert, who killed one second half Oakland drive at the Pittsburgh 20 and another at the Steeler 30.

Lambert's second fumble recovery at the Pittsburgh 30 set up Franco Harris' 25-yard touchdown run early in the fourth quarter to give the Steelers a 10-0 lead. His third fumble recovery at the Oakland 21 enabled Pittsburgh to score its second touchdown on a 20-yard pass from Terry Bradshaw to John Stallworth.

On both touchdowns, rookie defensive back Neal Colzie was the goat, failing to keep Harris inside on an aborted off-tackle play and falling down in the end zone while Stallworth was leaping for what proved to be the winning touchdown grab.

"It was going to be a difficult pass to catch," said Stallworth of his touchdown. "I knew I'd have to jump for it...he (Colzie) just made it a whole lot easier for me by falling down."

Mel Blount, who led the NFL in interceptions this season with 11, did a remarkable job in shutting off Cliff Branch, who didn't catch a pass until just 1:11 remained in the game. Branch, who led the Raiders with nine regular season TD receptions, almost did the Steelers in with his second and final catch of the game at the Pittsburgh 15 as time ran out.

That 37-yard reception came the first play after the Raiders recovered an onside kick following George Blanda's longest field goal of the season (41 yards) to pull Oakland within six points with just 12 seconds left in the game.

"When they recovered that kick," Lambert said, "People didn't realize how close we were to losing. But Mel (Blount) played it perfectly. He let Branch catch the ball and then tackled him before he could get out of bounds. If there was interference giving them the ball that deep in our zone, who knows what might have happened."

"It's just so tough," said Raider linebacker Phil Villapiano, who was hit with a costly 15-yard penalty for unnecessary roughness during the Steelers' initial touchdown drive. "It seems like every year it happens to us some way or other. I still think we're a great ball club. When we were down at the 15 and time ran out, you just had to wonder why we weren't there all day."

"We had all the confidence in the world that we'd win today. I don't think we were ever more ready. We had them, but we let them score twice on third-and-10 and that was it. It's just so, so tough to take every year. But we'll come back and some day we're gonna do it."

Staubach and Pearson Too Much

By JIM COUR
UPI Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Roger Staubach, who won the Heisman Trophy in glory-filled college days, and Preston Pearson, who never even played college football, teamed to carry the Dallas Cowboys into the Super Bowl.

"We've been the underdog all season," said Staubach. "That's the difference from before. People always expected us to go to the Super Bowl before they didn't this season."

The scrambling former Heisman Trophy winner from Navy was at his best Sunday, passing for four touchdowns — three of them to Pittsburgh Steelers castoff Pearson — in a 37-7 upset romp over the Los Angeles Rams.

at Miami, Jan. 18.

"I certainly never expected we'd be able to dominate a good football team like the Rams the way that we did," said Tom Landry, the 16-year Dallas coach whose team went into the game as a six-point underdog. "It just seemed to be our day."

"I honestly thought there was no way we weren't going to the Super Bowl," all-pro defensive end Jack Youngblood of the Rams said. "I had no doubts we would be in Miami — even with our injuries. But our luck ran out."

Staubach teamed with Pearson for an 18-yard touchdown on a screen pass in the opening quarter after linebacker D.D. Lewis intercepted a James Harris aerial.

In the second period, Staubach found Golden Richards all by himself in the end zone with a four-yard pass and Pearson later made a brilliant, diving catch of a 15-yard throw for another score.

Just 5:55 into the second half, Staubach surprised the Rams with a shovel pass to Pearson for a 19-yard touchdown.

Austrian Toni Fritsch finished the Rams off with field goals of 40, 26 and 26 yards.

"This was the most meaningful game I've ever had," said Pearson, a nine-year pro veteran who signed with the Cowboys as a free agent after being cut by the Steelers. Pearson played basketball at Illinois.

"I was scared to death when the game started. But I take pride in being able to play under pressure."

"As far as I'm concerned," lauded Staubach, "Preston has been the key to our season."

Staubach completed 16 of 26 passes for 220 yards against a defense that surrendered an NFL-low 135 regular season points. He also scrambled seven times for 54 yards.

"Staubach is a great one," managed a downcast Chuck Knox, the Rams' head coach who now has failed three straight years to get his club to the Super Bowl.

"Staubach's the best ... he's definitely the best," said Youngblood, who had heated words with the Cowboys' quarterback in the second half.

"Youngblood was a little frustrated," explained Staubach. "I got mad when I thought he hit me late. We bitched back and forth a little."

"Roger has had some great games over the years with us," noted Landry. "This was one of his best, but I don't know if I could say it was his greatest game ever."

After making the playoffs for eight straight years, the Cowboys missed last season. Landry said the key to this season was an 18-7 upset over Rams at Dallas in September to open the regular season. The NFC title upset of the Rams came one week after the Cowboys had shocked the Minnesota Vikings, 17-14, in the ice at Bloomington.

"That gave us a lot of confidence," Landry said. "We knew we could beat other good teams and keep ourselves in contention."

The Dallas defense played a marvelous game against Los Angeles. The Cowboys held Lawrence McCutcheon to 10 yards rushing only one week after he set a playoff record by running for 202 yards against St. Louis.

They intercepted the Rams three times, two by Lewis, and sacked quarterback Ron Jaworski five times for a total of 51 yards. Dallas linebacker Tom Henderson blocked a 34-yard field goal attempt by Tom Dempsey in the first quarter with the Rams trailing only 7-0.

The key to the game, according to Lewis, a seven-year pro from Mississippi State, was holding McCutcheon in check.

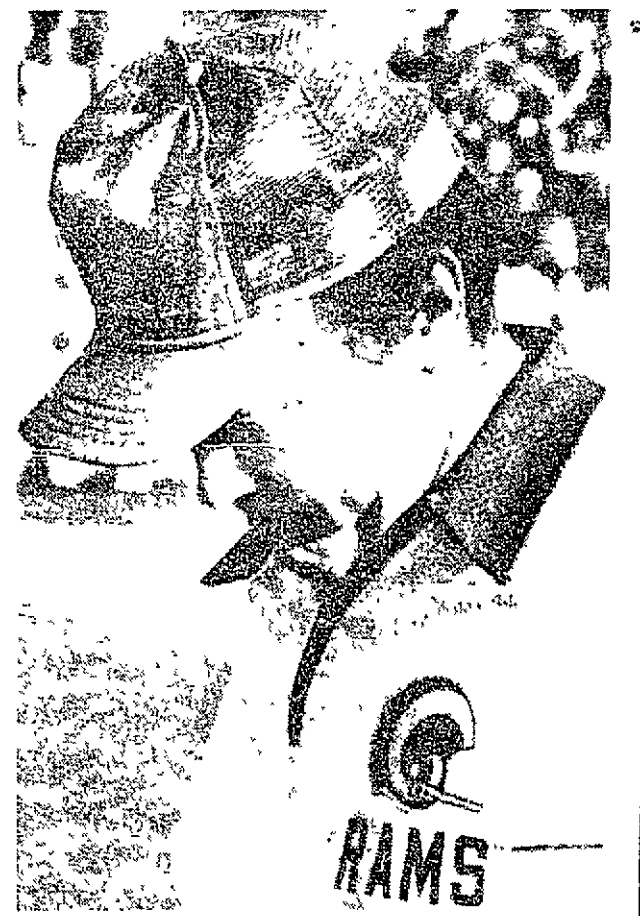

"Against Minnesota," said Lewis, "the key was to stopping Chuck Foreman. Against the Rams, we felt we had a good chance if we stopped Lawrence McCutcheon. So we geared our game plan to stop him."

"I never thought there could be any team that could score four touchdowns against us," said Youngblood. "And I never thought there could be any team that could hold us scoreless for three quarters."

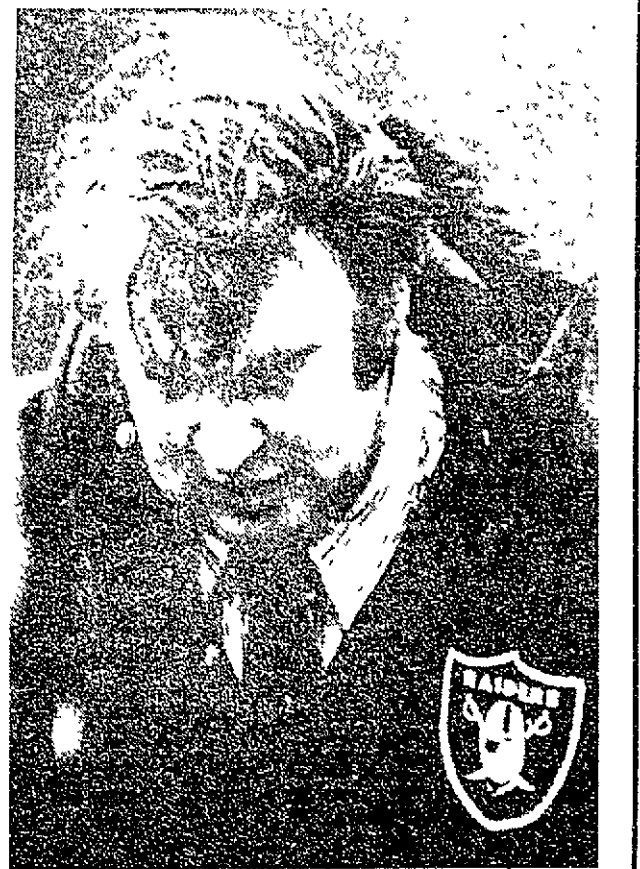

The Rams averted a shutout in the last period on a one-yard touchdown plunge by John Cappelletti.

CHUCK KNOX OF THE RAMS

JOHN MADDEN OF THE RAIDERS

Sunday Was Different

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — When Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw suffered a shoulder separation playing in Three Rivers Stadium two seasons ago, he left the game under a chorus of ugly boos.

But when Bradshaw was knocked out late in the fourth quarter of the Steelers' AFC title game with Oakland Sunday, the thousands of black-and-gold clad fans in the stands hurt with him.

"BRAD-shaw, BRAD-shaw, BRAD-shaw," the standing crowd pleaded in unison as he lay on the ground after taking a blow to the head, later described as a mild concussion, at the end of a 13-yard scramble.

The fans broke out in a wild chorus of cheers when Bradshaw struggled to his feet and again when he headed shakily for the locker room as his teammates played out the clock in the 16-10 victory that sent them to their second straight Super Bowl.

Despite his wooziness, Bradshaw noted the fans' reaction with pleasure and gratitude.

"I got hit in the jaw near the end and everything just went blank for a few seconds," he said haltingly, struggling to concentrate. "The crowd reaction was nice. I've been on the other side of the fence so I know how it is."

Roger Credits The 'Shotgun'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Cucumber-cool Roger Staubach credited Dallas' shotgun or spread formation plus a little luck Sunday for the Cowboys' 37-7 win over the Los Angeles Rams and a berth in Super Bowl X.

In a dressing room raucous with yells "yee-ow" and "we did it," Staubach and Coach Tom Landry were calm but obviously happy over the victory.

Landry, grinning ear to ear, said, "It just seemed to be our day. Everything fell in place for us. There's no way we're that much better than the Rams. Preston Pearson was fantastic. Staubach had one of his greatest days."

Staubach said he kept watching the sidelines when the Cowboys had the ball on third down to see what players the Rams would send in to change their defense.

"They were changing up on us a lot," said the husky quarterback. "Third down is the toughest down in this league. The spread gives me more time to find receivers."

"We kept calling the spread on third down and hit on a few key pass plays. That's why we won. I just think we were fortunate. Our defense played well. If we played the Rams against next week, it could be turned around."

On the second Dallas touchdown when Staubach found wide receiver Golden Richards all alone in the middle of the end zone and flipped a pass to him, Staubach said, "it was a play action pass. They played run and we passed. That's all there was to it. Their safety blitzed and Golden was uncovered."

Preston Pearson, the running back who was cut loose by the Pittsburgh Steelers and picked up by Dallas as a free agent at the start of the season, was another ear-to-ear grinner.

"This is the most meaningful game and season I've ever had," said the 30-year-old former Illinois University basketball star. "I can't tell you how good I feel inside for making a contribution for the Cowboys."

Pearson, known as "the other Pearson," because of the more prominent Dallas wide receiver Drew Pearson, scored three touchdowns on passes from Staubach.

Preston Pearson did not play football in college but was drafted in an experimental choice by the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League. He was on a special team for the Colts when they lost to the New York Jets in the 1968 Super Bowl. He played briefly last year when the Steelers won the championship.

He said he had no resentment against the Steelers for letting him go.

"Themse guys are my friends," he said. "I've known most of them for five years. But once you get on the football field, it's war. I'll play my game in the Super Bowl and they'll play theirs."

Staubach gave the Rams credit in an indirect way for giving the Cowboys impetus at the beginning of the 1975 season.

"The opening game was a key game for us because we're a young team," he explained. "And when we beat the Rams (18-7) in that opener, it gave us confidence."

Staubach and Ram defensive end Jack Youngblood exchanged some hot words during the last few minutes of the game Sunday but the Dallas quarterback laughed off the apparent dispute.

He said, "Youngblood was a little frustrated and I got mad when I thought he hit me after the play was over. We bitched back and forth a little."

With an impish smile, he added, "I sure don't want to say anything bad to him off the football field."

Pearson and Cowboys A Very Happy Marriage

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Running back Preston Pearson was set loose by Pittsburgh and waived by every other team in the National Football League last September. But the Dallas Cowboys suddenly needed help because of injuries and they grabbed him.

The union was a happy one and reached a climax of sorts Sunday when Pearson, the 30-year-old former Illinois University basketball star, caught three touchdown passes from Roger Staubach in a 37-7 win over the Los Angeles Rams.

The Rams were favored by one touchdown but were never really in the game

Pearson was drafted by the Baltimore Colts in an admitted experiment since he did not play football in college. He appeared undyingly grateful to the Cowboys for picking him up and said after the Ram win:

"This is the most meaningful game and season I've ever had. I can't tell you how good I feel inside for making a contribution to the Cowboys."

Pearson scored on passes good for 18, 15 and 19 yards but all were rather short and he had to do some running to get into the end zone. The third pass was a shovel of only a few feet from Staubach behind the line of scrimmage and Preston rambled around his left end to get to paydirt.

"I got to give the line credit," he said, "for good blocking but I have to say I can run well when I get the chance."

Pearson is a durable 6-1 205-pounder and up to now has been known as the "other Pearson" because he was overshadowed by the wide receiver Drew of the same surname.

He has had, like the Dallas veterans, some Super Bowl experience with both Baltimore and Pittsburgh.

Pearson is the only player on the Dallas squad who has played with a team other than the Cowboys in the NFL.

The Elusive Mr. Pearson

Lambert Was the Story

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Just one look at Jack Lambert told the story of Sunday's Oakland-Pittsburgh American Conference title game.

Lambert's right hand was a crimson mess, his knuckles swollen almost twice their size. His bright gold pants were covered with blood. The arms of his thermal undershirt were streaked and smeared. There were two huge welts across his face.

But Lambert was a contented man. Pittsburgh's second-year middle linebacker recovered a playoff record three Oakland fumbles to key a magnificent defensive effort that led the Steelers to a 16-10 victory over the Raiders and a second straight Super Bowl berth.

"It's a great satisfaction beating Oakland," said the man his teammates call, "the meanest man in football." "Oakland is one of the best teams in pro football. You know you've played well when you can beat a team of that caliber."

Lambert doesn't have any secret for recovering fumbles, though he always seems to be in the right place at the right time. "Actually, I don't realize what happens or what goes into recovering fumbles," he explained. "You see the ball and you go get it. I don't think I'm especially good at it or anything. The key is simply pursuit. We get as many black jerseys as we can around the ball and if it pops loose, someone is bound to come up with it. This was one of the hardest hitting games I've ever played in my life. It seems like it's always Oakland that we really knock heads with."

Lambert's superb effort almost went to waste

as Oakland scored on George Blanda's 41-yard field goal with just 12 seconds left to narrow the lead to 16-10 and then recovered an onside kick. But Ken Stabler's desperation pass from the Raider 45 was caught by Cliff Branch at the 15 but he was decked as time ran out.

"People don't realize just how close we came to losing that game," said Lambert. "My heart was beating—pounding, really—at the end. Kicking that field goal was just a brilliant call by their coach—it absolutely took me by surprise. I was so scared at the end. So many things could have happened. He could have slipped away. There could have been an interference. God, was I happy when it was over."

Lambert was one of the few Steelers who wasn't bothered by the icy 15-degree temperature.

"I've never minded playing in the cold," he explained. "I'm from Ohio (Kent State) and it gets pretty cold there. Actually, I think it's all in your mind. You condition yourself to block out the weather factor and just concentrate on what you're doing out there."

"The field was pretty bad, though. It looked like a hockey rink or something. I've never seen it so bad. It was surprising. They usually take good care of it."

Despite his bloody appearance, Lambert seemed less bothered by it than the onlookers who were cringing.

"It's a tough game, a very tough game," he said with a faint smile. "Bloodshed is a part of it. It doesn't hurt as much when you win."

Turnovers Proved Fatal

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Phil Villapiano stood in the corner of a solemn Oakland Raider dressing room. The frustration was written all over his face.

"It's just so tough," said Oakland's All Pro linebacker after the Raiders had lost to the Pittsburgh Steelers 16-10 Sunday in the American Conference title game. "It seems like every year it happens to us some way or other. I still think we're a great ballclub. When we were down at their 15 and time ran out, you had to wonder why we weren't there all day."

Villapiano keyed a mighty Oakland defensive effort that kept Pittsburgh's high powered offense under wraps most of the afternoon. But turnovers in the icy 15-degree weather proved fatal to the Raiders, who were eliminated in the playoffs for the sixth time in the last seven years.

"We had all the confidence in the world that we'd win today," Villapiano said. "I don't think we were ever more ready. We had them, but we let them score twice on third and 10 and that was it. It's just so, so tough to take every year, but we'll come back and someday we're gonna do it."

"We worked hard all week. We knew what they were going to do and we were stopping them. Don't take anything away from those guys—that's one helluva ball team—but we were just as good today. Maybe if we had just a little more time...but then isn't that always the story?"

Villapiano was referring to a desperation pass by Ken Stabler to Cliff Branch after Oakland had pulled to within 16-10 on George Blanda's 41-yard field goal with 12 seconds left and then recovered akl onside kick. Branch caught the ball at the Steeler 15 and was belted down as time ran out. Villapiano also had his own frustration, a notly contested personal foul call that enabled Pittsburgh to drive to its first touchdown and a 10-0 lead.

Terry Bradshaw threw a short pass to John Stallworth, who made a diving catch. A Raider defender went sliding by Stallworth as the Steeler receiver rose to run. Villapiano slammed Stallworth into the frozen artificial turf and was penalized 15 yards for a late hit.

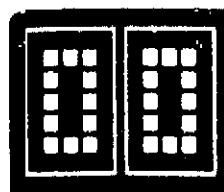

"I'm not stupid enough to hit a guy when he's down," he explained. "I didn't know if he was down. There was no whistle and the guy got up and started to run. There were two refs standing right there and they didn't drop a flag. Then this guy (Pat Mallette) who wasn't even close to the play comes out of left field and says I hit him late. I didn't think it was a very good call. It hurt us and I feel bad about it. They went in and scored. Maybe we could have stopped them."

Stallworth actually agreed with Villapiano. "Actually, I didn't know what happened on the play," he said. "I caught the ball on the ground and I got up and started to run. I got hit from behind and I went down. It wasn't anything special—it didn't hurt or anything. I didn't even know that was the penalty."

Villapiano feels the Steelers will repeat as Super Bowl champions.

"I have all the confidence in the world that they'll win," he said. "There's not a National League team that can stay with them. That's one helluva team. They hang together. They're good, man, just good."

He shook his head and smiled. The frustration of what could have been was all over his face.

Bartkowski, Brazile Top Rookies

By Murray Olderman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — There is, after all, a raison d'être for all those fancy scouting systems in professional football —

Blesto, Cepo, Quadra, Galaxy — to which 25 of the 28 teams in the National Football League belong.

Last January, Cepo, a seven-team scouting combine, certified Steve Bartkowski of the University of California as the top college prospect in the United States, which led Atlanta to pick him first in the draft.

At the same time, Galaxy, which enrolls four teams, among them Houston, convinced the Oilers that their top pick in the draft should be Robert Brazile, a mobile linebacker from Jackson State University.

Those judgments have today been vindicated by the selection of Steve Bartkowski and Robert Brazile as the winners of the Bert Bell Memorial Trophy as rookies of the year in the National and American Football Conferences, respectively.

The final voting was conducted by Newspaper Enterprise Association.

They received their trophies on Jan. 3 at a luncheon hosted by Shulton, Inc., in Los Angeles, the makers of Old Spice, which conducted preliminary national balloting for the five finalists in each conference. The awards were also announced by John Unitas during the NFC Championship Playoff Game and Bartkowski and Brazile each were presented with a 1976 Chrysler Cordoba automobile. The eight other finalists each received engraved digital watches.

Barely 18 months ago, Steve Bartkowski had decided he was through with football, that he would never play again, that his future was slugging a baseball. He had finished his junior year at the University of California as a second string quarterback behind Vince Ferragamo (now at the University of Nebraska). He skipped spring practice to concentrate on a baseball career.

But Steve, like a lot of guys before him going all the way back to Jim Thorpe, found out he couldn't hit the curve. Coach Mike White at California felt that Bartkowski was still an outstanding football talent and in July, 1974, he was persuaded to turn out for the California varsity again in the fall. Almost at the same time, Ferragamo transferred to Nebraska and big (6-4, 215) Bart was all California had to play quarterback. The results were sensational as he passed for 2,560 yards and was a unanimous All-American selection.

With the Falcons this fall, he immediately established himself as the regular quarterback once the season began and, although handicapped by an injury to his left elbow which kept him out of several games, he was the difference between a team which floundered when he wasn't on the field and could play equally with any power in the NFL when he was directing the Atlanta attack.

The statistics were impressive enough as he threw for 1,662 yards and 13 touchdowns, but beyond them he was, despite his inexperience, an inspirational leader for the Falcons and the best first year quarterback this observer has seen in 25 years.

His closest voting competition for NFC rookie honors came from a couple of smallish running backs, Mike Thomas of Washington and Willard Harrell of Green Bay.

Robert Brazile came into pro football with a lot less attention than Bartkowski, although his credentials were just as respectable.

At Jackson State, the touted player was Walter Payton, the running back drafted first by the Chicago Bears, and a good one. But Brazile was also considered "can't miss" when he was picked as the Oilers' top choice. An early injury to veteran linebacker Duane Benson gave Brazile (pronounced the same as the country) his chance. He was never moved out.

"There was never a doubt about Robert," says Ed Biles, the Oilers' defensive coach. "He's played outstanding football every game. He's got good intelligence, good movement."

He also has size, 6-4 and 230, and has been timed in a phenomenal 4.6 for the 40-yard dash.

In the Oilers' unique 3-4 defense, which deploys four linebackers, Brazile as an outside man had dual responsibility against the run and the pass and demonstrated fine coverage while preserving his reputation as a rugged tackler.

A pair of defensive specialists, corner back and punt return ace Neal Colzie of the Oakland Raiders and tackle Louis Kelcher of the San Diego Chargers, also figured strongly in the AFC voting.

The winning selections were made by a panel of NFL team captains and coaches.

The Bert Bell Trophy for rookie of the year was inaugurated in 1964 by Newspaper Enterprise Association. The very first winner was Charley Taylor of the Washington Redskins. He has just become the most prolific pass receiver in the history of pro football.

Close One for St. John's Redmen

By UPI

St. John's almost got a taste of its own medicine Saturday.

The 11th ranked Redmen, who came close of upsetting top-ranked Indiana last week in the Holiday Festival Tournament, came close to being upset themselves Saturday night before downing St. Joseph's (Pa.) 75-62.

In other games involving New York State college basketball clubs, W. Virginia blasted Syracuse 97-75, Virginia Tech humbled St. Bonaventure 115-74, Maryland bombed Long Island University 111-88 and Siena edged Union 69-64.

In the Lafayette Invitational Tournament, host Lafayette downed Army 74-61 in the championship game while New Hampshire topped Rochester 80-72 in the consolation game.

St. John's had trouble getting their offense untracked in the early going but built up a 20-point lead once they regrouped midway through the second half. The Redmen were paced by 13-point efforts from George Johnson and Cecil Belford.

West Virginia got 23 points from Stan Boskovich in their win over Syracuse as the Orangemen ended a four-game winning streak. Dale Shackelford paced Syracuse with 17. Second-ranked Maryland got 28 points from Steve Sheppard and 26 from guard John Lucas as LIU could not keep up with the Terrapins running game. Ernie Douse paced LIU with 32 points.

Larry Cooke hit for 25 points as Virginia Tech out-rebounded St. Bonaventure 60-29. Glenn Hagan paced the Bonnies with 17 points.

In other games, Pitt romped over Buffalo 83-65; RPI ripped Albany St. 79-65; Canisius edged Fairfield 72-70; and

It was Gannon over St. Francis (N.Y.) 70-63; Hofstra squeaked by Iona 75-74, Southampton got by Brooklyn 76-71 and N.Y. Tech nipped Adelphi 70-69.

Lanier Out for Month

DETROIT (UPI) — The Detroit Pistons, already reeling from the effects of key injuries, will have to get along without star center Bob Lanier for about a month.

The burly 6-foot-10 Lanier learned Sunday he has a fractured left shoulder, suffered Saturday night in Detroit's 104-100 victory over Cleveland. His arm has been placed in a sling and he will be lost to the National Basketball Association team for a minimum three weeks.

"I'm not surprised it happened, the way they've been pounding on him in there," said Detroit Coach Ray Scott, who will go with Earl Williams, rookie Lindsay Hairston and George Trapp at center in place of the Pistons' leading scorer and rebounder.

Lanier, third member of the starting five Detroit opened the season with to be felled by injury, is averaging 21.4 points plus 12 rebounds a game. He is among the top 10 in four of the NBA's statistical categories.

Teams had been ganging up on the Pistons' main man ever since sparkplug guard Kevin Porter and his running mate, John Mengelt, were injured in the same game. Both suffered knee injuries Dec. 9 at Golden State.

Mengelt missed 11 games before returning with a heavily taped knee, but Porter underwent surgery and his effectiveness when he returns near the end of the regular season has to be questionable.

In addition, replacement guard Wali Jones played only one game for Detroit and suffered a knee injury which will idle him for another couple of weeks.

Detroit had just begun playing good basketball when Porter and Mengelt were hurt and that sent the Pistons into a tailspin from which they haven't recovered.

The club has lost 13 of 17 games and Milwaukee finally wrested first place in the Midwest Division from Detroit last week after the Pistons had held it since Nov. 5. The division has the worst record in the league.

"We won't try to get anybody else while Bob's out," Scott said. "We can do it. This type of thing happens in sports. We'll just have to get along."

There's A New Kid on the Block In Atlantic Coast Conference

By UPI

There's a new kid on the block on "Tobacco Road" and he plans on making big trouble for the ruling class.

Of the four universities that comprise the state of North Carolina's "Tobacco Road" basketball contingent in the Atlantic Coast Conference, the one that has been down-trodden the most over the past decade has been Wake Forest.

The Deacons, who have had only three winning seasons since 1964, never had been able to keep up either with North Carolina State, North Carolina or Duke when it came to landing recruits. That is, until Carl Tacy came on the scene three seasons ago.

No longer are the Deacons the laughing stock of the ACC. Under Tacy, Wake Forest has slowly developed into a power that is beginning to gain some recognition nationally.

Although unranked despite a perfect record, the Deacons proved last weekend they belong somewhere among the top 10 teams when they upset third-ranked North Carolina and eighth-ranked North Carolina State on successive nights to win the Big Four Tournament at Raleigh, N.C., for the second straight year. The two victories left the Deacons with a 10-0 record, their best start since 1927.

"I felt they should have been rated before they came here," said dejected Coach Norm

Sloan of North Carolina State. "They will be now, I'm sure, and justifiably so. They're a very fine team."

"We thought we should have been ranked when we were 80," said Schellenberg. "But we knew we didn't play as tough a schedule as some other teams. But I think we should be in the top 10 now."

Another team that has been overlooked in the ratings is West Texas State. The unranked Buffaloes upset ninth-ranked Louisville, 84-78, in overtime Saturday night to raise their record to 9-1 and should crack the top 20 this week. The Buffaloes' Reggie Ramey sent the game into overtime with a jump shot with six seconds left and Brad Schreck scored four points and intercepted two passes in overtime to spark the victory.

In other games involving top-ranked teams, No. 1 Indiana edged Ohio State 66-64, No. 2 Maryland crushed Long Island University 111-88, No. 4 UCLA defeated No. 6 Notre Dame 86-70, No. 5 Marquette defeated South Carolina 82-70, No. 7 Alabama whipped Vanderbilt 83-66 and Nevada Las-Vegas, tied with Louisville for No. 9, edged Pan American 100-95.

Indiana was pushed to the limit against Ohio State but remained unbeaten in 10 games as All-America Scott May scored 24 points and Kent Benson added 23. The heavily-favored Hoosiers never led by more than six points and twice trailed. The score was tied 17 times.

Steve Sheppard scored 28 points and All-America guard John Lucas added 26 to lead Maryland to its 10th consecutive victory. Maryland's 6-foot-11 freshman center, Larry Gibson, had 16 points and 12 rebounds while Ernie Douse led LIU with 32 points.

UCLA, which hasn't lost since its opener against Indiana, played what Coach Gene Bartow called "our best game" in thrashing Notre Dame. Richard Washington, hitting on 11 of 16 field goal attempts, led the Bruins with 24 points while All-America Adrian Dantley had 25 for Notre Dame.

Lloyd Walton had 24 points and Earl Tatum chipped in with 22 in helping Marquette raise its record to 8-1. Marquette opened up a 47-31 halftime lead and was never challenged by the Gamecocks, who dropped to 6-4. Nate Davis led the Gamecocks with 22 points.

nation's top offensive team, ran its record to 13-0 behind the sharp-shooting of Sam Smith and Robert Smith. Sam had 28 points and Robert added 16 to pick up the slack from Eddie Owens, the Rebels' leading scorer who was held to five points. Marshall Rogers, the nation's leading scorer, scored 29 points for Pan American but managed only six points in the second half.

Elsewhere, 7-foot James Edwards scored 25 points to lead No. 11 Washington to a 106-75 victory over Seattle; St. John's (N.Y.), also ranked No. 11, defeated St. Joseph's (Pa.) 75-62; Ernie Grunfeld got 25 points to lead No. 13 Tennessee to a 79-73 triumph over Georgia and Rickey Green tallied 20 points in pacing No. 15 Michigan to an 82-72 triumph over Northwestern.

Also, David Marrs and Cecil Rose scored 23 points apiece in pacing No. 17 San Francisco to a 94-73 rout of Houston; Bruce King scored a career high 32 points to lead No. 18 Iowa to an 84-60 victory over Illinois and Kyle Macy also hit his career high, 38 points, to help Purdue upset No. 19 Minnesota, 111-110 in double overtime. It was Minnesota's first loss in nine starts.

Another Jabbar Lesson For Frustrated Walton

By UPI

Portland's Bill Walton had two fine spots from which to view Los Angeles' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar Sunday night.

One was from inside the pivot where Jabbar, a fellow alumnus from UCLA, continued to teach Walton lessons in dunking, hooking and rebounding.

The other was from the bench, where Walton was forced to sit after getting himself in foul trouble trying to guard the 7-foot-2 Jabbar. The lessons learned there were somewhat more subtle.

Neither spot proved very enjoyable for the 6-11 redhead.

In another typical game for him, Abdul-Jabbar scored 39 points and grabbed 15 rebounds in leading the Lakers to a 110-101 victory and helping them snap a four-game losing streak. Abdul-Jabbar hit 15 of 22 from the field.

Walton finished with 11 points and connected on only five of 17 shots from the field. Earlier this season, Jabbar had scored 48 and 41 points against Portland.

The Lakers overcame a four-point halftime deficit as guard Lucius Allen, another former Bruin, scored 17 of his 19 points in the second half. He and Abdul-Jabbar led a 21-2 blitz during a seven-minute stretch of the third period when the Lakers came from a 62-54 deficit to lead 75-64.

Cuard Larry Steele led Portland with 30 points, a season high. Steele had been averaging only seven points a game. Portland played without starting guard Geoff Petrie and lost his replacement, rookie Lionel Hollins, in the second period with a hip pointer.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Kansas City beat Phoenix, 98-86, and Seattle stopped Golden State, 97-85. In the ABA, the New York Nets ripped Indiana, 119-98.

Kings 98, Suns 86. Ollie Johnson came off the bench late in the third quarter to spark Kansas City to 10 straight points and help the Kings break an 11-game losing streak. Johnson, who had six points during the streak, finished with 16, while guard Nate Archibald had 29 points and nine assists and center Sam Lacey hauled in 14 rebounds.

Sonics 97, Warriors 85. Reserve forward Mike Bantom keyed a second-half rally and Fred Brown blew the game open in the third quarter as Seattle snapped Golden State's three-game win streak. Bantom poured in 11 of his 13 points in the second quarter as the Sonics moved out to 51-40 halftime lead. The Sonics led 66-48 with 8:29 to play in the third quarter when Brown pumped in 10 straight points as the Sonics opened up a 66-48 lead.

After the outcome was decided, Warrior sharpshooter Rick Barry was ejected with 6:09 to play in the final period. Referee Tommy Nunez ruled that Barry had pushed him following a scramble for a rebound. Barry, held to just 12 points, was jeered loudly by the crowd of over 13,000 as he waited several minutes before departing to the locker room.

Nets 119, Pacers 98. New York centers Kim Hughes and Swen Nater combined for 17 points and 16 rebounds in the first half to spark the Nets. The win for New York was its sixth straight against the Pacers and eighth straight at home. Led by Brian Taylor's 12 points, New York took control of the game in the first quarter, opening up a 20-15 margin to 33-19 at the end of the period.

Italian Wins Slalom Race

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, West Germany (UPI) — Fausto Radici of Italy today won a men's World Cup slalom ski race from his countryman Piero Gros.

Defying an ice-coated course, Radici secured himself the victory in a two-heat aggregate time of 85.81 seconds. Radici had already topped the intermediary standings after the first run.

Gros, who was eighth after the first heat, finished as runner-up with a two-heat aggregate of 85.90 seconds.

Third place went to Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden with a two-run total of 86.23.

For Tuesday, Jan. 5, 1976

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This should be a very busy day, but do things so that you don't paint yourself into a corner. Plan carefully.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Activities and outside interests are apt to be accentuated today. Take care not to find yourself on too many committees.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is one of those days where you could have too many irons in the fire. Isolate your important goals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It would be unwise today to try to sell others on ideas you're not too sure of. If you make a pitch, know the facts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Take extra pains today in situations where you're helping others to sort out. Take complicated matters one step at a time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will find today that not everyone you're associated with can be handled with the same techniques. Size up each one separately.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be careful today you don't let your projects overlap. Do the ones you can do thoroughly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Continue to keep a tight rein on the old checkbook and credit cards. Shop wisely so as not to get in a bind.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't be pressured into situations today where you feel you have to act against your better judgment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Rather than look for excuses today, face issues squarely. If you made a boner, 'fess up to it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Material conditions are likely to be a bit mixed for you today. Be extra prudent. It could put you on the plus side.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't take things for granted today where your interests are concerned. Look out for yourself the same as the other guy.

This coming year should be a very exciting and active one for you. You're apt to be a trifle restless and frequently short tempered, but pleasurable trips are likely.

Jean Adams' TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Ph.D.

PUBLIC KISSING: (Q.) Why is kissing in public poor taste? I don't believe in puritan ethics. Kissing is a respectful way for a girl to show affection for a boy. Affection is not poor taste.

People are supposed to live up to their beliefs. Everyone has his or her own beliefs. What happened to freedom of speech, religion, belief and way of life. I am 17 years old and I am just as human as the next person. — Tired of Ethics in Texas

(A.) Kissing is a private thing between you and another person. That is why I do not encourage boy-girl kissing in public.

There are many completely normal private things that you do, but not in public, for two main reasons:

First, your own modesty. If that doesn't bother you, you must consider the modesty of other people ("the next person," as you put it). Doing things before them that modesty or custom prevents them from doing in public disturbs them.

PUSHER: (Q.) I love this guy Manuel. He takes drugs and sells them. He is always in trouble with the cops. I don't take drugs anymore.

My mother and father don't like Manuel because they know about the drugs and the trouble. Also they don't like him because he's different from us.

When I was 17 he asked me to move into an apartment with him. I said no. I'm 18 and I could leave. I want to and he wants me to. But I want to go with my parents' best wishes, not with them hating me. Please help me decide what to do. — Desperate in Pennsylvania

(A.) Manuel's differences in heritage and background are not important. They could be overcome. But his other differences — the drugs, the criminality — damage him. They may doom him. They will damage and perhaps doom you too if you join him. Love is not worth that.

(Write to Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received Dr. Adams cannot send personal replies.)

Cousteau: A Child of the Universe

By Ira Berkow

NEW YORK (NEA)—Jacques Cousteau, the famed sea explorer, sat in a hotel dining room in Manhattan, a town he describes as a concrete booby-hatch. He wore an aqua-blue suit and took periodic sips from a close-by glass of water. The venerable mariner was obviously landsick.

He had come here perforce to promote his television sea special (on January 25). The conversation went on to coral reefs, the subject of his upcoming special, and how they devour each other; and a future project, the voyage to seek the lost continent of Atlantis.

He talked about the human qualities of dolphins—"if one breaks a rule, he is ostracized and then usually dies of a broken heart"; and the braininess of the sperm whale—"tops among non-human creatures"—and gave a little whistle of admiration, when suddenly he was interrupted.

A uniformed waiter had a delivery for Captain Cousteau. The small package was marked "urgent."

"I must see this or I will be for the whole time very anxious," said the gray-haired 65-year-old Frenchman, in a buoyant accent.

Cousteau fumbled with the tightly taped package. His snaky hands with neatly trimmed nails are smallish and lean and surprisingly delicate, suggestive of his over-all aspect.

Two spools of film were in the box. Costeau held one up to the window. He stuck his generous nose and thin-rimmed glasses closer; his face grew grave "I cannot believe this," he said.

He began flicking swiftly at the serpentine film. As he watched it flit by, his forehead bunched into mine furrows. The wattles under his chin, partially covered by his yellow turtleneck sweater, quivered slightly as he swallowed. When he finished, he looked up and said softly, "Forty per cent of the film is ruined."

"It is because of the shutter on one of our cameras," he continued. "We went in for a checkup good and it came out bad."

The film—seven miles worth—dealt with a project in Greek waters in which he and his crew aboard the "Calypso" worked for three weeks. He said the shooting could never be duplicated.

"But, bon, that's my problem. And I am not upset."

Discreetly, it was mentioned that he did not sound convincing.

"No, no. There is nothing that can upset a reasonable person," he said. When he first dived into the "silent world without sunshine" in 1936—while doing cladestine operations for the Frenchy government—Cousteau says he found the "access to serenity."

"I have come to the same conclusion as I think, for example, wild-life park wardens," he said. "We have no time for internal problems. We try to concentrate on the truly important things—the struggle for survival, the protection of our children, and keeping safe and simple our little corner of the world. These are the lessons of nature."

"All emotional tension is artificial. It is entirely imposed upon us. People analyze themselves instead of looking outside. Inside—inside ourselves—is not so beautiful. In nature, these inner conflicts do not exist."

"But people have gone far from nature. They live in these concrete jungles and all around is the ugly. Like the motor car—steel box with doors and windows and buttons and handles. Even when a man goes into a forest, he wears boxes around his feet and head. And hands, if it is cold, He is packaged."

Costeau continued, "I don't believe in any kind of religion. But I believe in the orientation of the universe. To what end, nobody knows."

"But if we believe in creation, then the rest of religion is nonsense. And to analyze it is meaningless, like psychiatry. We are totally negligible and have nothing to do with what's going on in the universe—its unstoppable progression."

"The earth will be consumed by the sun in four or five billion years, and the universe will carry on without man—exactly as before, no change."

Cousteau added, "The really spiritual person can always be comforted. He knows he is only a small fleck in the great stream. And he knows life is all an incredible miracle, and in a universe where there is practically no life outside this little planet."

"I am an admirer of life, and have no interest in power or riches or material goods for their own sake—that leads only to hysteria. I marvel instead at one leaf, at the sonar system of dolphins, at the pupil of the eye of a beautiful woman."

"I feel my purpose is to fight to keep the earth as beautiful as possible, to keep it as free from pollution and human desecration as I can, and to share with people the splendor of it."

Cousteau took a sip of water, slowly, and then said, "I look forward to going back home, back home to the sea. It will be so beautiful. But no, I do not describe it, I enjoy it."

The Captain stood up and excused himself. "I must send now a cable to my crew," he said, his voice rising along with the rest of him, "and tell them to throw that camera overboard!"

DR. DUTTO . . . A PLEA

KINGSTON
Emphasizing that precautionary safety procedures are "better late than never," Ulster County Health Commissioner Dr. Bartholomew J. Dutto has urged homeowners to be sure that their heating systems are cleaned, inspected and in proper working order.

Failure to adequately maintain home heating systems, said the commissioner, could result in carbon monoxide poisoning, fire and tragedy.

Dr. Dutto stressed that more than 10,000 people in the United States are affected by carbon monoxide poisoning each year. Nearly 1,500 lives are claimed annually and others experience headaches, dizzy spells, weakness, mental depression and nervousness from exposure to small amounts of the gas. In New York State alone last year, he said, 42 persons died from carbon monoxide poisoning.

The gas is produced when fuels burn incompletely. When sufficient fresh air is available and the fuel is burning properly, there is little danger of carbon monoxide poisoning. "Operating any internal combustion engine, such as a car, or an improperly adjusted fuel-burning appliance, such as a spaceheater, in a closed area without adequate ventilation, can be fatal," said the commissioner.

To guard against such catastrophes, the Health Department has recommended a number of safeguards:

- All home fuel-burning equipment should be inspected and serviced annually.

- Fuel-burning heaters used to warm the house should be vented to the outside. If an unvented heater must be used, a window should be left open at least one inch. Unvented heaters should be turned off at night.

- Gas ranges or ovens should not be used for heating a room.

- A charcoal grill or hibachi should not be used in an enclosed area. Burning charcoal emits a large amount of carbon monoxide.

- Garage windows and/or doors should be left open while operating an automobile engine or other internal combustion engine.

- Car mufflers and tailpipes should be checked for leakage.

Car windows should be opened when the car is stopped for any period of time with the motor running.

Dr. Dutto also warned homeowners to be aware of the vague symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning: Mild cases, he noted, produce drowsiness, headaches, blurred vision, irritability and an inability to concentrate. Severe cases cause nausea and vomiting, shortness of breath, convulsions, unconsciousness and death.

Victims, he said, should be brought into the fresh air.
